Hi Brett,

I wanted to follow up with the memo I sent you on 4/26 with regards wot a radio announcement for WMHK. Have you had a chance to review the request? Any thoughts?

Thanks,
Wendy

CNN just reported that JEffords has called a press conference for tomorrow morning and that Sen. Reid has offered to give his chairmanship up to Jeffords and that Jeffords accepted. Official line from Jeffords still that he hasn't made up his mind.

In response to your questions on cars to the RNC event, I conferred with Brett who confirmed that, if someone took a car pit car to the RNC event last night, there needs to be reimbursement from the RNC. This rule would not apply to the motorcade, however.

As a general matter, no one should take car pit cars to political events (other than Card, Rice, or others who may need access to secure communications); but if someone does so, there must be reimbursement. Card, Rice, et al. likewise must reimburse for trips made to the political events.

Brett, correct me if I have misstated anything or have oversimplified it.

Subject: Update and Request on H.R. 577 - Disclosure of Presidential Library Funds

Yesterday, May 17th, the House Government Reform Committee approved H.R. 577, by voice vote. The bill would require Presidential library foundations to disclose the names and amounts of donations received to Congress and to the National Archives (NARA) for posting on the Internet. As amended, the bill would require foundations to disclose donations above: 1) $200 while a foundation is raising money to build and maintain a library; and 2) $5,000 once the National Archives assumes responsibility of the library (to include current libraries). The Committee also adopted by voice vote a Democratic amendment applying these rules to members of Congress and their foundations. This provision reportedly may be struck by a manager's amendment when the bill is brought to the floor of the House.

As you may recall, NARA sent over a letter opposing the bill which we did not clear, because the Administration had not yet reached a position on the bill. NARA tells me that floor action is likely on this bill in the near future - maybe as early as the week of June 4th. Do we know what position the Administration will take on this bill? Do we know whether we would want to do a SAP once it reaches the floor? I'd like to get discussions going as soon as possible, so that we are not caught by surprise once the bill moves to the floor.

Thanks

NATIVE AMERICAN LENDING STUDY

CDFI Fund

U.S. Department of the Treasury

June 2001

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This study examines the lack of access to capital and financial services in Indian Lands[1], identifies the barriers responsible for this lack of access, and provides options for overcoming these economic and institutional barriers. Specifically, it examines three questions: 1. Why is access to capital limited in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, compared to the rest of the U.S.? 2. What are the barriers to greater capital access? 3. What can be done to remove these barriers and stimulate more lending and investment in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands?

The Problem

Economic and social conditions in many Indian Lands more closely resemble those of the nations of Eastern Europe or the former Soviet Union than the mainstream U.S. economy. For example:

- Unemployment rates in Indian Lands in the continental U.S. range between 20 percent and 80 percent, and are as high as 90 percent in some Alaska Native Villages, whereas, the unemployment rate for the United States as a whole is less than five percent.

- Poverty rates in the late 1990s were 26 percent for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, far above the national average of 12 percent.[2]

- Household income is about three-quarters the U.S. average.

- Transportation, telecommunications, and utility infrastructures are inadequate in Indian Lands.

While there are a number of historical, economic, and institutional reasons for these conditions, a major factor -- which heretofore has been given insufficient attention -- is the lack of access to capital and to financial services. A major feature of the economic disparity between Native American and Native Hawaiian communities and the rest of the nation is the significant difference in capital investment in the respective communities. The gap between investment in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, as compared to the United States as a whole, is large, and is a major impediment to capital access. The absence of financial institutions, services, and products, such as

[1]Indian lands are defined for the purposes of this study as lands owned by or under the control of tribal governments, including Alaska Native Villages.

[2]For the purposes of this study, the term "Native American" refers to Native American people residing in the continental United States as well as Native American and Alaska Native people residing in Alaska, unless specifically noted.

bank branches, ATMs, and loan services in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands is evidenced by the following[3]:

- Only 14 percent of Indian Lands have a financial institution in the community, fewer than half have such an institution anywhere nearby, and 15 percent of Native American people must travel more than 100 miles to reach a bank.

- Although 85 percent of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands offer deposit accounts to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians residing there, 50 percent of these financial institutions offer only two financial services -- ATMs and personal consumer loans.

- The financial products least accessible are large-business loans (67 percent of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians find these difficult or impossible to obtain), private equity investments (66 percent report that these are difficult or impossible to obtain), and conventional home mortgages (65 percent report that these are difficult or impossible to obtain).

- Between 41 percent and 78 percent of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have found most financial services difficult or impossible to obtain.

- Conventional mortgages and home equity loans are among the financial services least available in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and construction and property rehabilitation loans are also in relatively short supply.

- Business loans were rated as impossible to obtain by 24 percent of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians and as difficult to obtain by 37 percent. Business loans over $100,000 were the most difficult to obtain.

- The equity investment gap between Native American and Native Hawaiian economies and comparable economies is estimated to be $10 billion, and between Native American and Native Hawaiian economies and the United States overall to total $44 billion.

[3]As determined in the research described in Chapter II.

Accordingly, the major objectives of this study are to identify the barriers to the relative lack of capital, credit, and basic financial services in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands and to develop policy recommendations that address these barriers.

Unique Study Approach

This study was designed to ensure that meaningful input from all of the stakeholders involved in the issue of capital access in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands was obtained. The approach of the study was not to recount economic problems on Indian lands and Native Hawaiian communities, but to provide a voice for the concerns and recommendations of those who are attempting to bring these communities into the nation's economic mainstream. To assist in accomplishing this, thirteen regional and two national workshops were held involving Tribal[4] leaders and economic development professionals, Native American and Native Hawaiian business people, private investors and bankers, federal and state government officials, and other stakeholders. Participants discussed the major barriers to Native American and Native Hawaiian access to capital and explored strategies and actions to take to overcome those barriers. These workshops represent the first comprehensive effort to bring all the various stakeholders together to discuss these issues and identify possible remedies, and from them emerged the barriers identified in the study and the options for overcoming them.

The workshops were supplemented with independent research:

- A nationwide survey was administered to Tribal government housing and economic development directors and private financial service organizations (FSOs) located on or near Indian Lands or located in Hawaii to identify the barriers to lending and to help develop policies to address those barriers.

- A study on equity investment in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands was conducted to provide the background and recommendations for enhancing equity capital access. This research included discussions with equity market participants, review of the relevant findings from the survey, and analysis of the findings from the workshops. In addition, a questionnaire was developed for participants in the equity investment roundtable that provided useful information about equity investment in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

[4]In this study, "Tribal" refers to Native American and Alaska Native governments.

Barriers to Capital Access

The study identified 17 major barriers relating to legal infrastructure, government operations, economics, physical and financial infrastructure, and educational and cultural issues.

There were three major legal barriers identified.

1. Inadequate Tribal Commercial Laws and Regulations. Investors and financial service providers are concerned that tribal courts may not be sufficiently independent of the executive branch of the tribal government, and ambiguous tribal commercial laws and regulations tend to make investors hesitant to invest capital in Indian Lands.

2. Inflexible Bank Lending Rules and Regulations. In many cases, underwriting standards that financial institutions use in mainstream communities do not meet the needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian people.

3. Limited Use of Trust land as Collateral. Financing home mortgages and business loans on trust land presents a major challenge, since most Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands are held in trust by the federal or state governments and cannot be sold or encumbered by a mortgage lien.

Two major government operations barriers were identified:

1. Cumbersome, Conflicting, or Ineffective Federal Programs and Regulations. The pace of government decision-making is slow and involves excessive requirements and paperwork, program requirements conflict with one another, programs fail to meet Native American and Native Hawaiian needs, and programs have restrictive entry guidelines.

2. Uncertainty Generated by Changes in Tribal Government Leadership. As is true in most elected governments, when a new administration is elected it may eliminate plans for initiatives begun by the previous administration. Since, most tribal governments do not collect taxes and support themselves by owning businesses, some of those initiatives may be business endeavors. Moreover, this dual role -- governing body and business owner -- can lead to situations where tribally-owned businesses may not operate as efficiently as those that are not owned by a governmental body when political goals and business goals conflict.

Three major economic barriers were identified:

1. Lack of Capital, Collateral, and/or Credit Histories of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Most Native Americans and Native Hawaiians do not have access to capital in the form of home equity, stock holdings, or other assets.

2. Negligible Economic Base on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. At present, Native American and Native Hawaiian communities lack adequate economic bases.

3. Lack of Networking of Native-owned Businesses With Equity Investors. Investors and Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs often live in different states and operate in different social and business circles, and this inhibits investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses.

There are two major physical and financial infrastructure barriers.

1. Lack of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands. Only 14 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities have a financial institution in their community, fewer than half of these communities have a financial institution nearby, only about half have an easily accessible ATM, and 15 percent of the residents of these communities must travel more than 100 miles to reach the nearest bank or ATM.

2. Lack of Physical and Telecommunications Infrastructure on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands. For example:

- Only 47 percent of households on Indian Lands have telephones,
- 26 percent of Native Americans do not have 911 services,
- 12 percent of Native American households lack electricity,
- 23 percent lack access to natural gas,
- 22 percent of rural Native American households have cable television,
- 9 percent of rural Native American households have personal computers (and of these, only eight percent have Internet access),
- 66 percent of the Indian Reservation Roads (IRR) system consists of unimproved earth and gravel surfaces that wash out in severe weather, and
- 26 percent of IRR bridges are deficient.

There were seven major educational and cultural barriers identified.

1. Lack of Knowledge or Experience With the Financial World on the Part of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. In many Native American and Native Hawaiian economies, financial transactions have traditionally been conducted using cash. Thus, many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians lack experience with and understanding of banking, credit reporting, and loan qualification processes and standards. They have difficulty obtaining credit, and they often lack knowledge and experience in preparing the business plans required for bank financing.

2. Lack of Technical Assistance Resources. The study identified the lack of technical assistance and training as a serious barrier, and throughout the workshops participants identified a variety of unmet training needs for tribal governments and Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs.

3. Failure of Lenders and Investors to Understand Tribal Government or Legal Systems. Lenders and investors have had limited exposure to tribal government operations, regulations, and enforcement, and they are concerned about not being able to collect on their debts or fear that the process of doing so will be complex and difficult.

4. Poor Understanding of Tribal Sovereignty and Sovereign Immunity. Lenders and investors do not understand tribal and village sovereignty and sovereign immunity, and are thus often reluctant to conduct business on Indian Lands because they fear that they will not be able to recover assets or enforce contracts.

5. Historical Absence of Trust Between Tribes and Banks. There has been a historical lack of trust between Native Americans and Native Hawaiians and financial service organizations (FSOs), and this has caused misunderstandings that lead to failed negotiations for loans, cultural isolation, increased costs of doing business for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, and a reluctance on the part of banks to underwrite loans.

6. Differences Between Native American and Native Hawaiian Cultures and the Banking and Investor Cultures. The differences between Native American and Native Hawaiian cultures and banking and investor cultures are substantial and involve differing views of wealth and sharing, profit motive, asset accumulation, credit worthiness, and land ownership.

7. Discrimination Against and/or Stereotyping of Native American and Native Hawaiian Communities. Native Americans and Native Hawaiians suffer from stereotyping and discrimination, and the problems range from cultural misunderstandings to overt redlining and discriminatory lending practices.

Potential Remedies

The study examined a number of potential remedies for the barriers identified.

1. Strengthen Tribal Governments. Tribal governments are sovereigns, but there are varying degrees of perception and understanding and of tribal governments as sovereigns, and lenders, investors, and tribal government officials agreed that the role of tribal governments in economic development needs to be refined.

2. Enhance the Tribal Legal Infrastructure. Study participants recommended a strategy of creating a more pro-business environment on Indian Lands, through such actions as:

- Establishment of a tribal legal infrastructure for business development, including tribal commercial codes, foreclosure regulations, bankruptcy codes, a permitting process, and general regulatory framework,

- development of zoning codes and land use plans, and

- clarification of sovereignty and sovereign immunity regarding business and housing development.

3. Strengthen Tribal Courts. Recommended actions include:

- The further development of independent tribal courts,

- provision of training for court personnel on commercial and financial law,

- increasing the skills and capacity of judges and judicial personnel regarding lender and investor issues, and

- establishment of enforcement procedures for foreclosure, repossession, garnishment, and bankruptcy.

4. Separate the Goals and Management of Tribal Government From Those of Tribal Business Development. Workshop participants recommended separating the goals and management of business and government, spinning off tribal owned enterprises to a separate body for oversight and management, delegating privately owned enterprise decision-making authority to a nonpolitical body, and clarifying the difference between tribal government and corporate liability.

5. Create Alternative Collateral Options for Tribal Trust Land. Workshop participants recommended recognizing and leveraging the value of sovereignty and trust assets, building equity pools from trust resources, and facilitating development of trust land through alternative means of valuation and collateralization, such as leaseholds and master leaseholds and converting traditional assets into collateral. Workshop participants also recommended that the federal government and the Hawaiian State Department of Hawaiian Home Lands should examine the feasibility of streamlining leasing procedures.

6. Improve Tribal Planning Processes and Structures. Workshop participants felt that tribal governments have the responsibility to establish a clear and concise vision, to formulate policies and strategic plans for overall economic development, and to cultivate a professional government workforce, and that there exists a need for a tribally-driven, systematic, and reliable approach to economic development.

7. Develop Access to Nontraditional Sources of Capital. It was agreed that tribal governments should develop their capacity to orchestrate and leverage all sources of capital, that financial institutions should develop new lending and financing products and revise underwriting criteria to meet unique tribal needs, and that develop micro lending programs for small business leasing and securitization of oil and gas reserves and timber.

8. Increase Equity Investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Several options were explored for increasing equity investment, including incubators, angel investors, community development venture capital, corporate venture capital funds, partnering with and receiving equity from corporations outside of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, private placements, and bridge financing.

9. Develop New Ways to Access Capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Workshop participants proposed several options for providing access to nontraditional sources of capital: Industry or industry sector specific incubators could be created that provide management and technical assistance, incubators could be customized for the specific needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian business owners, existing angel investor networks could be utilized, an angel network could be created that would specialize in investments in Native-owned businesses, community development venture capital (CDVC) funds could be used, state and city venture capital programs could be utilized, and a public/private intermediary could be formed to funnel funds into Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. In addition, the participants felt that Tribal or inter-tribal community development financial institutions (CDFIs), community banks, and other lending and investment institutions should be formed, and that Tribal or inter-tribal pools for loan guarantees, equity investments/venture capital, micro-lending and lending for housing and small business need to be developed.

10. Establish a Native American/Native Hawaiian Equity Fund. To attract equity to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, workshop participants suggested two possible options: The federal government could sponsor an equity fund to help encourage private sector investors to invest in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and/or a public-private partnership equity fund could established.

11. Increase the Number of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, a number of policies need to be considered, including creating more financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, expanding financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and creating community development financial institutions (CDFIs).

12. Develop Regional Financial Institutions. The stakeholders believe that regional partnerships and alliances are essential to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and possible strategies include building on partnerships established with the Fund's regional inter-tribal cosponsors and holding follow-up forums similar to those conducted in this study; establishing information clearinghouses at the regional level on model financing approaches, on how to access equity capital, and on sources of training and technical assistance; providing channels of information to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities so that they can adapt model approaches to their unique cultural setting; and establishing regional partnerships with banks, lending institutions, venture capitalists, federal agencies, and tribes/inter-tribal organizations.

13. Create Innovative Strategies to Develop Physical Infrastructure on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Various initiatives were explored at the workshops to facilitate development of a more adequate infrastructure system on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, including creation of partnerships with private developers to plan for infrastructure development, development of a federal infrastructure investment strategy that utilizes available federal resources and encourages private partnerships to participate in the funding and development process, set-aside infrastructure funding comparable in concept to that which is used to support Colonias[5], and creation of an entity similar to the Rural Community Assistance Project that would focus on infrastructure development in rural Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

14. Expand Technical Assistance and Training. From the workshops, several initiatives were identified for increasing technical assistance and training on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands: Provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians with financial literacy training that will allow them to understand finance and credit principles, furnish technical assistance I drafting funding plans and proposals, help tribal governments develop a comprehensive strategic plan to meet development and financing needs, assist lenders, investors, and potential business partners in developing an understanding of tribal laws, tribal enforcement capabilities, and lender rights, and help lenders, investors, and potential business partners understand federal programs, requirements, and application processes.

15. Expand Financial Education for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Workshop participants agreed that providing financial literacy education and personal and small business finance education for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians can provide them with the means to participate in the contemporary economy and that the financial literacy curriculum is readily available from various sources.

16. Develop Entrepreneurship Programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. These programs could include development of core materials on personal finance, small business finance, and entrepreneurship; establishment of teaching partnerships with tribal and non-tribal colleges, financial institutions, nonprofits, and CDFIs; incorporation of web-based training in the curriculum; and facilitation of funding and teacher recruitment through the private sector, tribes, inter-tribal organizations, and federal agencies.

17. Conduct Lender and Investor Education. Actions recommended by the participants include development of handbooks on tribal government structures, sovereignty and sovereign immunity, and land status; creation of a directory of tribal credit officers, economic development officers, and department heads and a directory of attorneys qualified to practice in tribal courts; development of a marketing campaign that illustrates effective practices and success stories, initiation of educational seminars by Native American and Native Hawaiian communities to introduce themselves and initiation of road shows focusing on investment opportunities on Indian Lands and on Hawaiian Home Lands.

18. Develop financial products and services that will meet the needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian depositors and borrowers. Workshop participants suggested that this could be accomplished through the development by financial institutions of new lending and financing products and revised underwriting criteria to meet the unique needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, the creation of micro lending programs for small business, and the creation of community development financial institutions.

19. Streamline and Improve the Efficiency and Effectiveness of Federal and State Programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Workshop participants consistently expressed the need for accelerating the pace of government decision-making, reducing excessive requirements and paperwork, rationalizing the requirements of different programs that conflict with one another, reforming programs that do not meet the needs of the community, and revising programs with overly-restrictive entry guidelines.

Examples of Successful Initiatives and Programs

One of the more important contributions of this study was the identification of programs and initiatives currently underway involving government, the private sector, and tribes that address the major barriers identified. Examples of some of these are given below.

Study participants recommended a strategy of creating a more pro-business environment on Indian Lands, through such actions as establishment of a tribal legal infrastructure for business development, and examples of initiatives that have already been implemented include:

- The Tribal Commercial Code (UCC), developed by the Navajo Nation, Crow Tribe, Hoopa Valley Tribe, Lummi Indian Nation, Northern Cheyenne Tribe, Cheyenne River, Mille Lacs Band, Rosebud Sioux Tribe, and Standing Rock Sioux.

- The Tribal Land Use and Planning Code, developed by the Navajo Nation, Cabazon Band of Mission Indians, and Gila River Indian Community.

- Tribal Zoning Codes, developed by the Navajo Nation, Colville, Muckleshoot, and Menominee.

- Building Codes, developed by the Colorado River Standing Rock Sioux and the Navajo Nation.

- Tribal Corporation Codes, developed by the Navajo Nation, Cherokee Nation, Oklahoma, and the Hoopa Valley Tribe.

- Tribal Housing Codes, model codes developed by the HUD Office of Native American Programs.

Workshop participants noted that lenders and investors are often reluctant to accept the jurisdiction of tribal courts to enforce financial contracts, and to address this problem, suggested increasing the capacity of tribal courts to resolve commercial and financial disputes and to enforce commercial codes. Some initiatives are currently underway:

- Approximately 247 tribal court systems have been established, including several appellate courts and four supreme courts, and Inter-tribal appellate courts.

- The Bureau of Justice Assistance, U.S. Department of Justice, and Bureau of Indian Affairs[6] are currently funding technical assistance and training grants.

- The National American Indian Court Judges Association has established the National Tribal Justice Resource Center[7] to assist tribes in strengthening methods of self-government and to provide technical assistance for enhancing tribal justice systems.

[7]www.naicja.org.

- The Tribal Court Clearinghouse[8] has been created as a resource for tribal court development, training, court review, code drafting, and training.

Tribal leaders and private investors suggested strategies that relied on accessing capital sources that have not traditionally been on the Native American investment "radar screen" and on expanding Native American awareness to include more equity and nontraditional financing and thus increase the likelihood of securing funding. Several potential strategies were discussed:

- Existing angel investor networks could be utilized and an Native American and Native Hawaiian angel network could be created. For example, the Center of North America Capital Fund is an angel investor network and investment fund that links two tribes -- the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa and the Spirit Lake Sioux -- with nationwide investors for investment in North Dakota. The CONAC Fund was modeled after Minnesota's Regional Angel Investor Networks Fund, a series of rural investment funds formed by the Minnesota Investment Network Corporation.

- A public/private intermediary could be formed to funnel funds to Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses. For example, the Hopi Credit Association provides a bridge between banks and tribal borrowers: It obtains funds from banks and handles all loan selection and servicing interaction with tribal members, the banks deal with a responsible tribal credit union that understands banking needs, and the Native Americans deal with a credit union that understands their needs. Another example is the Southern Ute Growth Fund, which uses a partnership approach and co-invests, using its growth fund and capital provided by outside investors, in a variety of growth opportunities.

- State and city venture capital programs can be utilized. For example, Canada has succeeded in reaching out to its aboriginal (Native Canadian Indian) population with a number of financing programs and loan and venture capital offerings. The Business Development Bank of Canada has dedicated the Growth Capital for Aboriginal Business loan program to aboriginal business needs, including management support and mentoring in alliance with CESO Aboriginal Services.

To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, a number of policies need to be considered, including creating more financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, expanding and/or rebuilding existing financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, purchasing existing banks, and creating community development financial institutions. There are several examples of successful initiatives:

- On the Cheyenne River Sioux Reservation, the tribe used an existing revolving loan fund to create the nonprofit Four Bands Community Fund, that provides loans to businesses.

- In 1990, the Navajo Nation had only three bank branches and one ATM serving a geographic area of 17 million acres. To increase the availability of financial services on the reservation, the tribe entered into an agreement with Norwest Bank (now Wells Fargo) to build four new branch banks, hire and train Navajo personnel, and target financing to business startups and housing development.

- In all, nine tribal-owned commercial banks, seven credit unions, and fourteen loan funds have been developed nationwide to serve tribal communities.

- Hawaiian Community Assets, Inc. is developing a charter for Bank Aloha, the first Native Hawaiian-owned bank.

- The CDFI Fund has certified 34 community development financial institutions that have Native American and Native Hawaiian communities in their service areas.

The stakeholders believe that regional partnerships and alliances are essential to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and examples of successful regional initiatives include:

- The Native American Development Corporation -- NADC is a nonprofit community development financial institution (CDFI) that provides Native American business communities in Montana and Wyoming with funds to create jobs, develop long-term economic self-sufficiency, and facilitate access to capital. Its Capital Loan Fund was initially capitalized with funding from banks, the federal government, First Nations Development Institute, and private corporations.

- The Native American Lending Group, Inc. -- NALG is a nonprofit multi-tribe community based financial institution in New Mexico that serves 19 Pueblo communities. It was created to provide Native American tribes, businesses, and individuals access to private investment capital.

- Coastal Enterprises, Inc. -- CEI is a nonprofit CDFI serving low-income communities in Maine. It provides financial and technical assistance for development and expansion of certain targeted industries, small businesses, housing, and social services. CEI mobilizes private and public resources to support projects and to facilitate self-determination and empowerment of communities, and it serves as a model for similar initiatives in the private and public sectors.

Recommendations

The workshop participants felt that the major stakeholders have mutually supporting roles in developing solutions, and we summarize below the key responsibilities identified for the tribes, financial institutions, and the federal government.

It was the consensus of the workshop participants that Tribes should:

- Adopt and implement capacity building programs designed to enhance Tribal knowledge of community development planning, banking and lending practices.

- Develop legal infrastructure and strengthen tribal courts.

- Leverage the value of sovereignty/trust assets and facilitate development of trust land.

- Create more financial institutions and facilitate access to capital sources that have not traditionally been used.

- Develop comprehensive strategic economic development plans and create proactive business environments.

The workshop participants recommended that financial institutions and investors:

- Adopt and implement capacity building programs designed specifically to enhance financial institution staff's understanding of Native American culture, law, governance, and markets.

- Recognize Indian Country as an emerging market for U.S. investment.

- Work with regional assistance, training, and mentoring programs that link capital providers to tribes.

- Develop new lending and financing products and Native American reservation or village-based programs.

The workshop participants recommended that the Federal government:

- Facilitate the financing of improvements in the physical, telecommunications, and utility infrastructure on Indian Lands.

- Sponsor the creation of a public/private equity fund to assist Indian Country in the financing of economic development projects.

- Provide support networks for and increase availability of technical assistance and training for a wide range of services including capacity building clearinghouses, networking forums, mentorship programs with industry, online technologies, and the linking of tribes with capital providers.

I. INTRODUCTION

I.A. Mandate for the Study

Congress, under P.L. 103-325 (September 1994) mandated that the Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFI) Fund conduct a study on lending and investment practices on Indian reservations and other land held in trust by the United States. Congress mandated that the study:

- Identify barriers to private financing.
- Identify the impact of such barriers on access to capital and to credit for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians.
- Develop recommendations for statutory and regulatory changes to existing federal programs.
- Develop policy recommendations for community development financial institutions, insured depository institutions, secondary market institutions, and private-sector capital institutions.
- Be submitted as a final report to the President and Congress.

  This report responds to the congressional requirement.

I.B. Rationale for the Study: Economic Conditions on the Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

Economic and social conditions on many Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands more closely resemble those of nations in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union than the U.S. For example:

- Unemployment rates on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands in the continental United States range between 20 percent and 80 percent, and are over 90 percent in some Alaska Native Villages where it is common for 90 -- 100% of the population depend on subsistence farming or hunting for their livelihood.
- Poverty rates in the late 1990s were 26 percent for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, lower than earlier in the decade, but still far above the national average of 12 percent.
- Household income is about three-quarters the U.S. level.

- Native American communities continue to have substandard and overcrowded housing, and there is a reported need for 210,000 housing units, including rental units.

- The rate of new business formation in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities is very low.

- Transportation, telecommunications, energy, financial, and other infrastructures are often substandard.

The majority of the nation's Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands share the same underlying economic characteristics as many other rural communities. In contrast to vigorous, complex, and highly variegated economies of urban areas, rural economic bases tend to be fragile and highly concentrated. Traditional forest, mineral extraction, and fishery activities will continue their long-term decline, even when the resources upon which they are based are not depleted. Government jurisdictions have highly constrained tax bases and limited public sector capacity, yet face infrastructure costs that reflect substantial diseconomies of scale. Rural service and manufacturing employment offer lower than average wages and relatively few opportunities to enhance worker skills. The low-wage service and manufacturing firms that gravitate to rural communities often tend to have very limited growth potential. Consequently, with the exception of rural communities on the outskirts of metropolitan areas or that have "special" advantages (e.g., Aspen), the impediments to economic development are formidable.

In addition to the burdens they share with non-Indian communities, many Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands simply do not present environments conducive to vigorous, self-sustaining economies. As noted, many suffer from under-investment in basic infrastructure -- roads, water and sewer systems, and energy and communications networks. In addition:

- Tribal laws and courts present uncertainties, both real and imagined, to outside investors

- Regulatory practices are often inhospitable to businesses and entrepreneurial activities.

- A substantial portion of the economic activity on Indian Lands is undertaken by enterprises controlled by tribal governments rather than private firms.

- Cultural norms that stress communal obligations combined with long histories of exploitation have shaped anti-business attitudes among large numbers of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians.

Given these circumstances, economic development efforts on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands must utilize innovative strategies to overcome substantial economic disadvantages and at the same time facilitate necessary institutional changes.

While there are a number of historical, economic, and institutional reasons for the conditions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, a major factor -- which heretofore has been given insufficient attention -- is lack of access to capital and to lending/borrowing services. A major feature of the economic disparity between Native American, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian communities and the rest of the nation is the significant difference in capital investment in the respective communities. The gap between access to capital and investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, as compared to the United States as a whole, is large.

Another impediment to capital access is the absence on native lands of financial institutions, services, and products, such as bank branches, ATMs, and loan services. For example, a survey carried out as a component of the research conducted here found that:

- Only 14 percent of Indian Lands and villages have a financial institution in the community, and fewer than half have such an institution anywhere nearby. Fifteen percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian residents of Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands must drive more than 100 miles or board an airplane to reach the nearest bank.

- Although 85 percent of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands offer deposit accounts to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, 50 percent of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands offer only two financial services -- ATMs and personal consumer loans (for autos, home furnishings, etc.).

- The financial products and services least accessible to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians are large-business loans (67 percent of survey respondents report these are difficult or impossible to obtain), private equity investments (66 percent report these are difficult or impossible to obtain), and conventional home mortgages (65 percent report these are difficult or impossible to obtain).

- Between 41 percent and 78 percent of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have found most financial services difficult or impossible to obtain.

- Conventional mortgages and home-equity loans are among the financial services least available on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands as compared with the banking service area overall. Construction loans and property-rehabilitation loans are also in short supply on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands relative to the bank's total customers.

  -- The percentage of the overall Financial Service Organization (FSO) loan portfolio represented by conventional home mortgages is disproportionately lower on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands (81.9 percent of the overall portfolio versus 54.3 percent of the portfolio of products offered to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians).

  -- Conventional home mortgages were rated as difficult or very difficult to finance by 65 percent of tribal respondents and 35 percent of Financial Service Organization respondents.

  -- There are fewer than 500 home mortgages on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, even though an estimated 38,000 households have sufficient income to qualify for a mortgage.

- Business loans were rated as impossible to obtain by 24 percent of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians and as difficult to obtain by 37 percent of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Large business loans for more than $100,000 were the most difficult business loans to obtain.

- The equity investment gap between Native American and Native Hawaiian economies and comparable economies is estimated to be $10 billion, and between Native American and Native Hawaiian economies and the United States overall to total $40 billion.

- Only a third of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands offer state loan or loan guarantee programs to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians residing there.

Accordingly, the major objectives of this study are to identify the barriers to the relative lack of capital, credit, and basic financial services on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands and to develop policy recommendations that address these barriers.

I.C. Profile of the Native American Community

There are approximately 2.7 million Native Americans, Native Hawaiians, and Alaska Natives living in the United States.[9] Their population has grown rapidly since the 1970s, and Native Americans and Native Hawaiians constitute the third fastest growing population segment in the nation, after Hispanics and Asians. The nation's 562 federally recognized tribes and villages, along with Native Hawaiian communities, are extremely heterogeneous with respect to traditions, cultures, and languages, and about half of the population lives in economically depressed rural communities. There are 290 Indian Tribes[10] in the continental United States and 268 Alaska Native villages in Alaska. Tribal populations range from fewer than five members on several acres of land to the Navajo Nation with 250,000 enrolled members and a land base of 17 million acres -- about the size of West Virginia. Tribal governments vary in size and organization from small elected councils to three-branch governments that include executive and legislative bodies as well as independent court systems.

Many tribes in the continental United States have been recognized as sovereign entities through peace treaties, congressional legislation, and U.S. Supreme Court decisions. Congressional legislation -- such as the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934, the Indian Financing Act of 1974, and the Indian Self-determination and Educational Act of 1975 -- further established the principle of tribal self-government. Most tribes, with the exception of those in Oklahoma, have a land base that comprises trust, allotted, and fee-simple land.

In the early 1970s, Alaska Natives negotiated the transfer of Alaskan land, previously held in trust by the federal government for their benefit. This land was given to Alaska Natives in exchange for the sale of land to the federal government for the Alyeska oil pipeline right-of-way. The Alaska Native Settlement and Claims Act of 1971 divided the state into twelve regions, created a for-profit corporation and a nonprofit corporation wholly owned by the tribal and village members of that region, and transferred ownership of that trust land to the twelve regional for-profit corporations. Some land was also transferred to several dozen village corporations.[11]

Although Native Hawaiians, who number 250,000, are not federally recognized as tribes on the mainland (as are Native Alaskans), they do maintain a formal relationship with the state of Hawaii. Native Hawaiians lived under a Monarchy until [9]The US Census Bureau estimates that there were 2.45 million American Indians, Eskimos, and Aleuts living in the United States as of October 1, 2000. The Office of Hawaiian Affairs has 250,000 enrolled members who, as of December 2000, declare Native Hawaiian descent.

[10]Here we use the terms tribes and tribal interchangeably to refer to tribal governments and to a given tribe as a whole -- i.e. the tribal government and the Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. We use the term tribal government to refer only to the tribe's government itself.

[11]The objective was to make it easier to develop trust land; however, corporate control of this trust land has often proved to be as burdensome to development as federal control was.

1893, and 203,000 acres were set aside for them under the provisions of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920. At present, this land holding totals 193,935 acres held as state trust land and administered by the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands, a state government agency. In 1970, the state created the Office of Hawaiian Affairs (OHA) as both a government agency and a trust to assist Native Hawaiians. OHA operates economic development, education, health and human services, land, and natural resource programs.

I.D. Plan of the Study

The remainder of this study is organized into three chapters:

- Chapter II describes the research design of the study, which included background research, a national survey, and regional and meetings and reports.

- Chapter III discusses the major findings derived here, identifying the barriers, remedies, and institutional actions pertaining to capital access and financing on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

- Chapter IV presents the major conclusions and recommendations of the study.

II. RESEARCH DESIGN

The design for this study was developed to ensure that findings and recommendations were derived from empirical data and research but also, and at least as important, that meaningful input from all of the stakeholders involved in the issue of capital access on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands was obtained. The latter was essential because, too often in the past, analyses of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians' economic problems relied predominately on abstract, third party research that failed to obtain stakeholder input. To ensure that this did not occur here, numerous meetings and discussions were conducted involving Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, private investors, federal and state government officials, and other stakeholders. Specifically, this study included:

- Thirteen regional workshops conducted to identify the barriers to lending and investment in the Native American community
- A national roundtable on barriers to lending on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
- A national survey of lending practices relating to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians
- A national roundtable and a research report on equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

These efforts are summarized below.

II.A. Regional and National Workshops

The process the CDFI Fund designed to conduct the Native American Lending Study combined two approaches. First, the CDFI Fund identified and involved experts in the field. Second, to ensure that all the major issues were addressed, to quantify the incidence and severity of barriers, and to ascertain whether the problems identified were widespread, the CDFI Fund conducted extensive additional research.

An innovative study design ensured that input from all groups involved in the provision of capital access on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands would be obtained. Tribal leaders, tribal economic development professionals, tribal entrepreneurs, commercial banking organizations and other financial institutions, public and private sector equity investors, U. S. government officials (from financial supervisory agencies, federal agencies, and secondary market organizations), officials from state agencies, and other experts participated in numerous and detailed discussions on the issue. Thirteen regional and two national workshops were conducted throughout the United States with the assistance of 14 regional co-sponsors, including regional Indian organizations, Alaskan Native corporations and Hawaiian state agencies. Of the approximately 700 participants, 43 percent were from Native American organizations, 24 percent were from financial institutions and 33 percent were from federal, state and non-profit organizations.

Thirteen regional workshops were held:

- Northwest Region -- Seattle, Washington, March 24-25, 1999; cosponsored by the Affiliated Tribes Of Northwest Indians Economic Development Corporation, Seattle, Washington

- Southwest Region -- Phoenix, Arizona, April 1-2, 1999; cosponsored by the Inter-Tribal Council Of Arizona

- Southwest Region -- Albuquerque, New Mexico, April 28-29, 1999; cosponsored by the All Indian Pueblo Council

- West Region -- Reno/Sparks, Nevada, May 12-13, 1999; cosponsored by the Inter-Tribal Council Of Nevada and the California Indian Manpower Consortium, Inc.

- Midwest Region -- Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, June 2-3, 1999; cosponsored by the Oklahomans For Indian Opportunity

- Great Lakes Region -- Minneapolis, Minnesota, June 29-30, 1999; cosponsored by the Midwest Alliance Of Sovereign Tribes

- North Central Region -- Rapid City, South Dakota, July 26-27, 1999; cosponsored by the Rapid City Housing Coalition and the Montana- Wyoming Tribal Leaders Council

- Hawaii Region -- Honolulu, Hawaii, August 11-12, 1999; cosponsored by the State Department Of Hawaiian Home Lands and the State Office Of Hawaiian Affairs

- Hawaii Region -- Hilo, Hawaii, August 17-18, 1999; cosponsored by the State Department Of Hawaiian Home Lands and the State Office Of Hawaiian Affairs

- Alaska Region -- Anchorage, Alaska, November 15-16, 1999; cosponsored by Alaska Village Initiatives

- Alaska Region -- Fairbanks, Alaska, November 18-19, 1999, cosponsored by the Tanana Chiefs Conference, Inc.

- Northeastern Region-Mystic, Connecticut, December 1-2, 1999; cosponsored by the United South And Eastern Tribes

- Southeastern Region -- Tampa, Florida, December 15-15, 1999; cosponsored by the United South And Eastern Tribes

In addition, two national workshops were conducted:

- The National Roundtable Meeting -- Washington, D.C., January 13-14, 2000

- The Equity Investment Meeting -- Scottsdale, Arizona, November, 28-29, 2000

Participants discussed the issues involved and identified the major barriers to Native Americans' and Native Hawaiians' access to capital, strategies to overcome them, and potential actions to take. These workshops represent the first comprehensive effort to bring all the various stakeholders together to discuss these issues and identify possible remedies, and a summary of each workshop was prepared.

II.B. The National Roundtable on Barriers to Lending on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

As described above, 13 regional workshops were conducted in an effort to identify barriers to lending and investment on Native American lands and to develop strategies and action plans for eliminating the barriers. In January 2000, representatives of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, along with Federal and financial institution representatives, were invited to Washington, D.C. for a roundtable discussion on these barriers and strategies. After discussing the issues raised in the regional workshops, participants focused on:

- How to access capital, equity, and investments.

- How to establish effective, mutually beneficial partnerships across stakeholder groups.

- The kinds of messages that should be delivered to the various audiences.

- Plans for implementing the recommendations developed.

- Success stories that demonstrate how Native American and Native Hawaiian communities have partnered with and/or leveraged public and private sources of capital.

The discussions at this workshop formed the basis for the recommendations contained in the current report

II.C. The Native American Lending Survey

II.C.1. Objectives of the Survey

Following the national roundtable, a nationwide survey was developed and administered to tribal governments and Native Hawaiian representatives and private financial service organizations (FSOs) familiar with lending on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands to identify the barriers exist to lending and to help develop and recommend strategies to address those barriers. Specifically, the objectives of the lending survey were to: Provide quantitative data to complement and enhance the anecdotal findings of the 13 regional workshops and the national roundtable that had been conducted; identify the kinds of relationships that exist between FSOs and Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, as well as the mix of financial services available or provided by FSOs to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities; and ensure that the issues addressed are representative of the diversity of both Native American and Native Hawaiian communities and FSOs.
The survey results were then compared to the results of 13 regional workshops and the national roundtable that had been held.

II.C.2. Survey Methodology

- *To conduct the survey, CDFI hired three contractors: Deloitte & Touche LLP, a large CPA and professional service firm with extensive experience in designing and conducting surveys, t*he Metro Chicago Information Center, a not-for-profit research and consulting firm, and the Johnson Strategy Group, Inc., the firm that conducted the 13 regional workshops and the national roundtables on lending and investment barriers described above.

Design of the survey began with a kick-off meeting between the Deloitte & Touche team and the CDFI/Treasury project team to review project goals, establish a project timeline, discuss the research methodology, and develop content guidelines for the survey instruments. Working closely with Treasury, Deloitte & Touche developed draft survey instruments designed to address the information needs identified during the kick-off meeting and to yield quantitative data to complement the qualitative data gathered during the regional workshops.

The Team developed two draft survey instruments, one for tribal governments and Native Hawaiian representatives, and one for FSOs. Slightly different versions of each instrument were developed for respondents in Alaska and Hawaii to reflect the appropriate terminology used in those areas.[12]

Surveys were sent to all Federally-recognized Tribes, including those in Alaska , as well as to non-Federally recognized Tribes in Oklahoma and to organizations representing Native Hawaiians, including the two Hawaii State agencies with missions relating to the Native Hawaiian community. Because surveys of Native American populations have historically yielded low response rates, the Project Team utilized the Social Research Laboratory phone center at Northern Arizona University, which specializes in surveys directed to Native American populations. The phone center sent out reminder faxes to a sample of non-respondents. After two weeks, the lab also conducted telephone reminder calls to all non-respondents in an effort to increase the return rate. After three weeks of phone calls, the survey response rate was 30 percent for FSOs and 18 percent for Tribal governments and Native Hawaiian organizations. The Project Team then analyzed the geographic distribution of survey responses and directed the phone bank to target geographic areas of low response. Members of the Deloitte Team also consulted with regional stakeholders to further promote the survey in areas of low responses.[13]

II.C.3. Survey Findings and Implications

The survey itself and the comparison of the survey and workshop results yielded a number of interesting findings, the more significant of which are summarized below.

First, the most significant barriers to lending and obtaining financial services and products concern lack of collateral, Native Americans and Native Hawaiians' lack of understanding of the financial world, inefficient government programs and regulations, and insufficient or nonexistent written Tribal commercial laws and regulations.

Second, there is a significant need for education, training, and technical assistance to increase the financial literacy of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents reported that adequate education and training is not being provided, and they rated the lack of such training as the second most significant barrier to accessing financial products and services.

[12]Appendix B contains the survey instruments and Appendix C contains data on the question-by-question responses.

[13]The final survey response rates were: For FSOs, 735 surveys were sent and 245 surveys were completed, for a response rate of 33 percent; for Tribes and Native Hawaiian representatives, 851 surveys were sent, and 212 were completed, for a response rate of 25 percent.

Third, conventional home mortgages were consistently identified as one of the most difficult products to finance on Indian lands or Hawaiian Home Lands. Conventional home mortgages were rated as difficult or very difficult to finance by 65 percent of Tribal and Native Hawaiian respondents and 35 percent of FSO respondents. In addition, the percentage of the overall FSO loan portfolio represented by conventional home mortgages is disproportionately lower for products offered to residents of Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands (82 percent of the overall portfolio versus 54 percent of the portfolio of products offered to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians.)

Finally, there is a significant difference in the perception of the two respondent groups with regard to ease or difficulty in accessing financial products and services, and tribal respondents rated access to financial products and services as more difficult than did FSO respondents. While both respondent groups rated personal/consumer loans and financial services (checking and banking accounts) as relatively easy to access, there was disagreement over the difficulty of access of the majority of the other products. Some of the more notable examples include small business loans, which were rated as difficult or extremely difficult to access by 63 percent of tribal respondents, but only 18 percent of FSO respondents, and home equity loans, which were rated as difficult or extremely difficult to access by 60 percent of tribal respondents, but by only 28 percent of FSO respondents.

II.D. The National Roundtable and Research Report on Equity Investment

II.D.1. The National Roundtable

In November 2000, the CDFI Fund convened a roundtable meeting of tribal officials, Native American entrepreneurs, key private and public sector equity players, government agency representatives, and experts who understand access to capital. This was the first time that representatives from all types of equity funding, including incubators and angel investors, venture capitalists, private equity fund managers, and public stock market investment bankers, from both private sector funds and public sector programs, were brought together to discuss the potential equity market on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Like the Fund's 13 Native American Lending Study workshops, the goal of this roundtable was to obtain input from individuals who have direct experience in dealing with the barriers of accessing or providing equity investments, and to develop appropriate strategies and actions to address these barriers.

Participants had experience with investing on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands or with potentially successful, transferable approaches to equity investment, experience with barriers to equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, or were recognized experts on the equity market and what drives it, and about half of the participants were private equity market players. Forty-seven participants participated in a two-day roundtable discussion, and a proceedings report was prepared.

The roundtable focused on defining the equity investment landscape, determining the elements of success for equity capital investors, and identifying Native American and Native Hawaiian opportunities for "getting on the equity investment radar screen." Structured discussion topics included:

- The equity investment landscape and "radar screen"
- The equity investment gap on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Equity types and investment criteria
- Equity investment issues, barriers, and impacts (from private sector v. Native American and Native Hawaiian perspectives)
- Strategies to improve access to equity capital
- Action plans and model approaches that can be transferred to Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

II.D.2. The Research Report

As part of this study, the CDFI Fund conducted research on equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands to provide the background and recommendations for enhancing equity capital access. Primary research included extensive discussions with equity market participants about equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.[14] Other primary research included review of the relevant findings concerning equity investment from the Native American Financial Survey and analysis of the major preliminary findings from the workshops. In addition, a questionnaire was developed for participants in the equity investment roundtable that provided useful information about equity investment performance and demand for equity on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

Research was also conducted on the amount of equity on Indian Lands, using mostly Census data and Native American-owned business data obtained from the Dun & Bradstreet Minority-Owned Business Database. CDFI Fund estimated the amount of equity in economies comparable to those on Indian Lands based on [14]The persons consulted who provided information about their experiences investing on Indian Lands , trying to invest on Indian Lands , or who could shed light on why they had not yet considered investing in Indian Country are listed in the Bibliography.

Census and related information, and data on underdeveloped countries were obtained from various UN, International Monetary Fund, and World Bank, and other sources.[15] These data, along with information on the effects of various public sector-sponsored, economically targeted, and community development equity investment programs, were analyzed to estimate the potential benefits of bridging the estimated equity gap. This primary research was supplemented with a review of over 150 secondary sources.[16]

Successful models being used elsewhere that may transfer well to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities were developed based on published reviews of these efforts, on analysts' knowledge of different programs, on interviews with practitioners, and on the roundtable discussions. Materials from the equity investment research were also used in the Equity Investment Roundtable, to provide a general overview of the equity landscape and to provide structure for the roundtable discussions. The roundtable discussions and conclusions were then combined to complete the analysis.

[15]These sources included the International Finance Corporation/ Standard & Poor's global stock market figures, the Milken Institute Capital Access Index, The Heritage Foundation ratings on ease of capital flows, and others.

[16]These included articles in the general press, books on investment and/or obtaining financing, government publications, testimony, and press releases, academic research articles, practitioner articles and guides, and tribal and Indian Country publications. A complete list is provided in the Bibliography.

III. BARRIERS TO PRIVATE FINANCING AND POTENTIAL REMEDIES

The thirteen regional workshops facilitated identification and prioritization of barriers to lending and investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, assessment of the impact of those barriers on the communities, and development of strategies for addressing the barriers. The workshops provided a forum for the stakeholders who live and work with these issues on a day-to-day basis, and working in teams, participants identified hundreds of barriers. They then prioritized the barriers and developed strategies and action plans to address them. The Fund synthesized the workshop barriers into a list of 110 generic barriers and 17 priority barriers.

The 17 priority barriers were used as the basis for further research, and the results from the national survey of tribal organizations and FSOs permitted a more detailed analysis of the barriers identified by type of respondent. Finally, barriers were reviewed during a national roundtable discussion and an equity investment roundtable discussion. The priority barriers are here grouped for discussion into five categories:

- Legal and Institutional Infrastructure Barriers
- Economic Barriers
- Physical Infrastructure Barriers
- Financial and Governmental Barriers
- Educational and Cultural Barriers

III.A. Legal and Institutional Infrastructure Barriers

III.A.1. Identification of Barriers

III.A.1.i. Cumbersome, Conflicting, or Inefficient Federal Programs and Regulations

Workshop participants consistently expressed concern with the slow pace of government decision-making, excessive requirements and paperwork, requirements of one program that conflict with those of another, programs that fail to meet the needs of the community, programs with overly restrictive entry guidelines, etc. Frustration was especially pronounced because the role of the federal government in developing Native American and Native Hawaiian economies can be so crucial. Participants noted that federal funding, combined with tribal resources, has been a major source of capital that often is necessary to leverage private capital. Accordingly, breakdowns or delays in the systems that deliver federal funding stymie the flow of private capital. Federal agencies have made strides in streamlining their applications and review processes with improved coordination and shortened response times, but there remains considerable room for improvement.

Inefficient regulations discourage lenders and investors from doing business in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. Resultant bureaucratic delays increase investor risk, the costs of doing business, and discourage business development.

III.A.1.ii. Inadequate Tribal Commercial Laws and Regulations

Some tribal governments have fully developed commercial codes and dual court systems, while others maintain the tribal council or executive body as the legal enforcement mechanism. Still other tribal governments are currently in the process of developing laws, regulations, commercial courts, and courts of appeals.

However, some FSOs are concerned that tribal courts may not be sufficiently independent of the executive branch of the tribal government to offer a secure source of recourse to aggrived parties from outside the community. Until investors feel confident that they can dispute a contract and appeal to a higher court, they will hesitate to invest on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

Inadequate and ambiguous tribal commercial laws and regulations create additional uncertainty for potential lenders and investors. Such uncertainty increases investors' perceived risks and cost. As a result few investors are unwilling to enter into contracts, and fewer home mortgages and business loans are thus made to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians.

III.A.1.iii. Inflexible Bank Lending Rules and Regulations

In many cases, underwriting standards that financial institutions use in mainstream communities do not meet the financial needs of potential borrowers on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands. Most mainstream financial institutions do not offer credit products appropriate for the income and credit histories of non-traditional income earners or for individuals with a minimal credit history. Few resources are available in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities to help people establish or repair their credit rating.

For example:

- Seasonal, agricultural, and part-time incomes are common in Native American, Native Hawaiian communities, and especially in Alaska Native Villages.

- Many non-traditional income earners use cash for all of their transactions and consequently have not established credit histories.

To fill this void, sub-prime lenders often provide loans that traditional lenders will not, increasing the risk that borrowers will encounter predatory practices.

III.A.1.iv. Limited Use of Trust land as Collateral Financing home mortgages and business loans on trust land presents a major challenge. Most Indian Lands in the lower 48 states and Hawaiian Home Lands in Hawaii are held in trust by the federal or state governments for the benefit of federally recognized tribes, Native Americans, and Native Hawaiians, respectively. These lands cannot be sold or encumbered by a mortgage lien, except as authorized by the Secretary of the Interior, in his or her sole discretion.[17] An obvious alternative to sale -- leasing -- requires approval from the Bureau of Indian Affairs or (in the case of Native Hawaiians) the state of Hawaii. The approval process can often take six months to two years, and even after approval, many traditional mortgage lenders are reluctant to accept a leasehold interest in property as collateral for a mortgage. The result is that most Native Americans and Native Hawaiians either purchase mobile homes, rent apartments, reside with friends or family, wait for public housing, or purchase a home outside their community.

In Alaska, federal ownership is replaced by regional corporation ownership of land creating similar difficulties. As in the continental United States and Hawaii, an Alaska Native wanting to build the home or business site does not own the land.[18]

Due to the limited use of Indian Land, and Hawaiian Home Land as collateral:

- There are fewer than 500 home mortgages on Indian Lands -- on which more than 1 million persons reside.

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians must usually leave their communities if they wish to become homeowners, and this out-migration results in the loss of talent and further creation of an economic base in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians lack home equity to pay for small-business start-ups, consumer loans, and college expenses.

[17] See 25 USC § 483

[18] The Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971 transferred trust land beneficiary status from the Alaska Native tribes and Villages to twelve regional corporations. See also, Alaska v. Venetie Tribal Government, 118 S. Ct. 948 (1998).

III.A.2. Potential Remedies

III.A.2.i. Strengthen Tribal governments

Lenders and investors have varying degrees of perception, understanding, and acceptance of the sovereign powers of Indian Tribal governments. Their concerns include sovereign immunity, government operations and processes, tribal laws, and judicial processes. Potential investors have serious concerns about sovereign immunity in particular. In the United States, neither the Federal Government nor (with certain exceptions) any state or local government may be sued without consent. Tribal governments and the courts are developing the rules of tribal sovereign immunity, but the process will require considerable time.

Participants in the national workshops and surveys identified the need to strengthen tribal governments to increase access to capital and address the following barriers:

- Lenders' and Investors' lack of understanding of tribal sovereignty and the impact of sovereign immunity on financial transactions
- Tribal government's lack of clear and predictable rules for waving or imposing sovereign immunity
- Inadequate tribal commercial laws and regulations (e.g., commercial, zoning, and building codes)
- Inadequate tribal government planning
- Limited use of trust land as collateral

Lenders, investors, and tribal government officials agreed that the role of tribal governments in development needs to be refined and rationalized.

III.A.2.ii. Enhance the Tribal Legal Infrastructure

Tribal sovereignty generally entails the right to govern, adjudicate disputes, and be immune from suit. In 1975, Congress promoted Indian self-government by enacting the Indian Self-Determination and Educational Assistance Act. Since then, tribal governments assumed from federal agencies increasing responsibility for day-to-day tribal affairs.

United States Supreme Court rulings and Acts of Congress have repeatedly affirmed the inherent sovereignty of tribal governments and the jurisdiction of tribal governments over their lands, subject to the will of the federal government. But when lenders and investors express concerns about sovereign immunity, they often mean that tribal governments have not developed or clearly defined the legal infrastructure of enforcement, comparable to that of the neighboring states and municipal governments where the financial institutions may be located. Federal and state governments have enacted limited waivers from suit for commercial development as a matter of public policy, and in some cases tribal governments have enacted limited waivers of sovereign immunity as standard business practice.

As tribal economies expand and as their capital needs increase, tribal governments need to cultivate an environment conducive to entrepreneurship, lending, and investment. A key component of a pro-business environment is a legal infrastructure that supports contracts and facilitates commercial activity in the communities. Tribes should, to the extent possible, reduce the uncertainties that concern lenders and investors. Appropriate laws and enforcement guidelines that are conducive to entrepreneurship, lending, and investment can accomplish this.

Study participants recommended a strategy of creating a more pro-business environment on Indian Lands, through such actions as:

- Establishment of a tribal legal infrastructure for business development, including tribal uniform commercial codes, foreclosure regulations, bankruptcy codes, a permitting process, and general regulatory framework.

- Development of zoning codes and land use plans.

- Clarification of sovereignty and sovereign immunity regarding business and housing development.

- Development of an educational program for lenders and investors on tribal government, laws, codes, and sovereignty and sovereign immunity.

Examples of initiatives that have already been implemented include:

- The Tribal Commercial Code (UCC), developed by the Navajo Nation, Crow Tribe, Hoopa Valley Tribe, Lummi Indian Nation, Northern Cheyenne Tribe, Cheyenne River, Mille Lacs Band, Rosebud Sioux Tribe, and Standing Rock Sioux.

- The Tribal Land Use and Planning Code, developed by the Navajo Nation, Cabazon Band of Mission Indians, and Gila River Indian Community.

- Tribal Zoning Codes, developed by the Navajo Nation, Colville, Muckleshoot, and Menominee.

- Building Codes, developed by the Colorado River Standing Rock Sioux and the Navajo Nation.

- Tribal Corporation Codes, developed by the Navajo Nation, Cherokee Nation, Oklahoma, and the Hoopa Valley Tribe.

- Tribal Housing Codes, model codes developed by the HUD Office of Native American Programs.

- The Model Tribal Code that was developed by the University of Montana-Missoula School of Law and has been adopted by several tribes.

- Two hundred governance projects specifically for code development have been funded by the Administration for Native Americans, Department of Health and Human Services.

These strategies have been successful for many Indian tribal governments, and are presented as examples for other tribes to consider in designing necessary legal infrastructures to assist in accessing capital for economic development purposes.

Another potentially useful strategy that emerged from the workshop discussions is to develop policies that delineate the roles and responsibilities of the tribal government and the private sector, such as the adoption of tribal uniform commercial codes, the establishment of policies and procedures for using property, assets, and collateral to attract financing, and the development of regulations for business transactions, such as licensing, incorporation, and contracts. For example, Tribal Corporation Codes have been developed by the Navajo Nation, Cherokee Nation (Oklahoma), and the Hoop Valley Tribe.

III.A.2.iii. Strengthen Tribal Courts

Tribal courts are an integral part of a legal environment that promotes/facilitates economic development on Indian Lands, but they vary widely in their capacity, sophistication, and breadth of jurisdiction. Some tribes are too small to have a court system and rely primarily on courts in surrounding jurisdictions and federal courts for enforcement. CDFI Fund research determined that there are approximately 275 formal tribal courts, including a peacemaker, traditional, and formal courts.

Workshop participants noted that lenders and investors are often reluctant to accept the jurisdiction of tribal courts to enforce financial contracts, although whether this reluctance is based on experience with courts or lack of knowledge of them, is unclear. To address this problem, the strategy participants recommended was to increase the capacity of tribal courts to resolve commercial and financial disputes and to enforce commercial codes. Recommended actions include the further development of independent tribal courts, provision of training for court personnel on commercial and financial law, increasing the skills and capacity of judges and judicial personnel regarding lender and investor issues, and establishment of enforcement procedures for foreclosures and repossession, garnishment, and bankruptcy. Some initiatives are currently underway:

- Approximately 247 tribal court systems have been established, including several Tribal appellate courts, four supreme courts, and Inter-tribal appellate courts.

- The Bureau of Justice Assistance, U.S. Department of Justice, and BIA are currently funding technical assistance and training grants.

- The National American Indian Court Judges Association has established the National Tribal Justice Resource Center to assist tribes in strengthening methods of self-government and to provide technical assistance for enhancing tribal justice systems.

- The Tribal Court Clearinghouse has been created as a resource for tribal court development, training, court review, code drafting, and training.

III.A.2.iv. Separate the Goals and Management of Tribal Government From Those of Tribal Business Development

A change in tribal administration can create uncertainty about the continuation of business agreements and operations. Few tribal governments have a tax base to finance their operations, so most own and operate commercial enterprises to finance the government. Therefore, most tribal governments maintain a dual role of governance and management oversight of tribally-owned enterprises. This dual role can become complicated -- especially when the two roles are in conflict. In the CDFI Fund's workshops, both lenders and tribal participants expressed concerns that newly elected officials and their administrations may change a previous administration's public, administrative policies and programs in such a way as to affect private sector business arrangements. The possibility that new administrations will undermine the business arrangements of their predecessor creates uncertainty and, accordingly, risk for lenders and investors as well as for tribal business people.

Lenders, investors, and Native American and Non-Native business partners prefer that tribes separate management of tribal enterprises from the management of tribal government operations. This would de-politicize business decisions and benefit tribal governments by providing more time and resources to focus on nation building issues without the day-to-day distraction of business management issues. One strategy suggested by workshop participants is to separate the goals and management of business and government, and recommended actions include spinning off tribally-owned enterprises to a separate body for oversight and management, and delegating privately owned enterprise decision-making authority to a nonpolitical body, thus clarifying the roles between tribal government activities and tribally-owned enterprise/corporation business activities. For example, several tribes have created tribally-owned enterprises and corporations with separate boards and management. The Navajo Nation and Southern Ute Tribes have created tribal for-profit oil and gas corporations, the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Community owns and operates a sand and gravel business and a cement company, and the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians owns and operates manufacturing plants and construction companies, all with separate governing bodies.

III.A.2.v. Utilize Tribal Land Tenure and Trust Status

One of the most complex and long-standing barriers identified in the course of this project is the trust status of land on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. In the latter part of the eighteenth century, Congress passed the Trade and Intercourse Act which voided any transfer of tribally-owned land without the approval of the federal government. In 1887, Congress passed the Allotment Act, which provided to individual Native Americans land from both the public domain and from the reservations themselves. Often, reservation land that remained after allotments were issued would be sold in fee status to non-Indians, creating a checkerboard land tenure system and jurisdictional uncertainty. This practice was ended in 1934. At present, land tenure on most reservations is identified as tribal trust, individual allotment in trust, and fee-simple. Changes in federal policy, the historical distrust by Native Americans, and basic cultural differences relating to land ownership have led to the present confusing, hybrid system of land tenure on reservations.

Tribal land is held in trust by the federal government and cannot be conveyed by the tribe or members for such transactions as business leases or mortgages, without the approval of the Secretary of the Department of the Interior.[19]. Such restrictions effectively deprive Native Americans and Native Hawaiians of what is potentially the most valuable asset in their communities and creates an obvious barrier to the availability of debt financing. Not only was this barrier identified in the regional workshops, but in the Fund's financial survey, 55 percent of the FSOs cited limited use of trust land as collateral as a significant barrier.

One strategy recommended by workshop participants is to recognize and leverage value of sovereignty and trust assets and to build equity pools from trust resources. For example, the Southern Ute Tribe has established a growth fund built on the tribal mineral estate. This fund has leveraged outside capital and currently provides the basis for tribal economic self-sufficiency.

Another potential strategy would be to facilitate development of trust land and unlock the value of assets through alternative means of valuation and of turning assets into collateral. Alternative collateral options could be utilized, including master leases, [19]P.L. 106-568 provides an important modification to existing law concerning the leasing of Navajo Nation trust lands. The Navajo Nation Trust Land Leasing Act of 2000 allows trust land to be leased, subject to tribal regulations, without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. See also, note 19, above.

and streamlined leasing procedures could be implemented to overcome restrictions on using trust land as collateral. For example, in 2000 Congress passed the Omnibus Indian Advancement Act (P.L.106-568), which established a streamlined process for the Navajo Nation to lease trust lands without having to obtain the approval of the Secretary of the Interior for individual leases. The terms of these leases, in the case of business or agricultural leases, cannot exceed 25 years, but may include an option to renew for an additional 25 years. For residential purposes, leases can be for a term of 75 years.

III.B. Economic Barriers

III.B.1. Identification of Barriers

III.B.1.i. Lack of Capital, Collateral, and/or Credit Histories of Native Americans on Indian Lands and Native Hawaiians

Most Native Americans and Native Hawaiians do not have access to capital in the form of home equity, stock holdings, or other assets, and the result is that:

- Native American and Native Hawaiian communities lack sufficient equity capital.
- Compared to the United States overall, fewer business and consumer loans are granted on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
- Lack of home-ownership denies Native Americans and Native Hawaiians the most common form of collateral to obtain loans for purchases or small-business startups.
- Individual Native Americans and Native Hawaiians wishing to start a business, purchase a home, or make another large purchase are often not able to qualify for the loan that they need.

In the course of this study, the CDFI Fund estimated that equity on Indian Lands in the continental U.S. totals about $10 billion[20] and that externally provided equity is less than five percent of the total $10 billion. Thus, most of the equity on Indian Lands must be raised from internal sources -- primarily tribes' reinvested profits.

[20]This estimate was derived by extrapolating data on the net worth of existing Indian Country businesses to the full Census count of Native American businesses in the continental U.S. (projected forward from 1992 using historical growth rates and assuming that about half of the Native American-owned businesses in the 1992 Economic Census are on Indian Lands).

The Fund estimated the amount of equity that could normally be expected to be on Indian Lands by examining comparable state and foreign economies.[21] The Fund then estimated the level of equity Native American communities should have if they were to achieve a rate of investment comparable to the rate experienced generally in the U.S. economy. Finally, the Fund compared Native American economies to similar economies around the world by analyzing their respective estimated GDPs, populations, numbers of jobs, and numbers of firms.

Our research determined that Native American economies have about half of the level of equity that comparable international economies have. Further, the comparison with similar economies suggests that if external equity investors were located in or serving Indian Lands and that if the strategies to overcome existing obstacles discussed in this report were pursued and were successful, an additional $10 billion in equity could be invested in the Native American economy. We would expect to see similar results in Hawaii and Alaska.

However, if Native American and Native Hawaiian communities are to close this gap, not only must investors be attracted to fund current Native American and Native Hawaiian opportunities, but the infrastructure and the economic diversification of Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands must be enhanced to be comparable to average U.S. levels.

What accounts for the relative lack of capital and collateral and the equity gap on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands? The workshops identified several causes:

- The perception of risk that surrounds private lending on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands and results in little infusion of development capital.

- The underdeveloped nature of Native American and Native Hawaiian economies, which does not attract private capital.

- The difficulty that private investments on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands have in producing adequate financial returns.

- The inability of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities to attract conventional financing due to trust land status.

Whatever the cause, the lack of equity capital is serious. Industries without significant tangible assets, such as service businesses, software firms, and R&D-intensive businesses, may have difficulty obtaining loans. Equity investment is needed not only for startup and early stage businesses, but also to expand existing businesses. In the survey, only seven percent of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians reported obtaining private equity investment, including venture capital and startup equity capital, with relative ease. Less than one percent reported that private equity was easy to obtain, while 66 percent found obtaining private equity difficult or impossible. Profitable and growing businesses in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities have difficulty obtaining even small amounts of equity capital to expand because entrepreneurs do not know how to apply for it and have difficulty locating equity investors.

[21]The data were obtained from states with a profile similar to that of Indian Lands and from developing countries comparable to Native American communities on Indian Lands in the continental U.S. Comparable economies were selected based on size, economic conditions, and, for foreign countries, the ease of capital access.

III.B.1.ii. Negligible Economic Base on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

At present, Native American and Native Hawaiian communities lack an adequate economic base, and the impacts of this are severe:

- Business creation is forced off tribal lands and job seekers are forced to seek work off Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
- Native American and Native Hawaiian communities experience a "brain drain," as the most highly skilled members of the community emigrate in search of employment opportunities.
- Private firms, investors, and financial institutions are unable to obtain the scale or volume necessary to support business.
- Community economies are concentrated in one economic sector and are vulnerable to the economic fortunes of that sector.

III.B.1.iii. Lack of Networking of Native-owned Businesses With Equity Investors

The fact that investors and Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs often live in different states and operate in different social/business circles inhibits investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses. Angel and venture capital investors generally take an active role in the management of the companies in which they invest, and most prefer to invest in nearby companies. States with the highest number of venture capital offices, such as California and Massachusetts, are not generally the states with the highest number of Native American and Native Hawaiian firms, nor are they the states with largest Native American or Native Hawaiian populations.[22] In addition, angel investors and venture capitalists often obtain investment leads and business plan submissions through a network of trusted sources, generally colleagues that they have worked with or socialized with for years, and Native

[22] CDFI Fund Equity Research Report

American and Native Hawaiian business owners and entrepreneurs are not usually members of these referral networks. This geographic and social mismatch between Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs and investors impedes access to outside investment for many Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs. This is a serious problem, because angel and venture capital investors are a significant source of funding for entrepreneurs attempting to start businesses.

III.B.2. Potential Remedies

III.B.2.i. Develop a Planning Process and Structure

Workshop participants felt that tribal governments have the responsibility to establish a clear and concise vision, to formulate policies and strategic plans for overall economic development, and to build a competent government workforce. With the passage of the Indian Self-Determination and Educational Assistance Act of 1975, tribal governments gained a level of control that placed the responsibility for defining the level of self-governance on each tribe. Exercising sovereignty requires that tribes establish a vision, implement policies, and install stable institutions of governance.

One strategy recommended is to create a favorable economic development environment, and there exists a need for a tribal-driven, systematic, and reliable approach to economic development. Along with an improved legal infrastructure, a vision and a plan for long-term economic development must be developed. The CDFI Fund Financial Survey found that some tribes have economic development plans, land use plans, and programs encouraging entrepreneurship; however, many of these plans lack crucial components.

A related strategy is to develop comprehensive local economic development plans that contain a vision of the future, strategic plans that includes specific steps to achieve the vision, business development plans, and financial plans with at least a ten year horizon. The plans should include strategies for economic diversification, a consumer spending assessment, and land use and zoning plans. They should identify businesses the tribe wishes to target -- those that are appropriate for the tribe and that are consistent with the tribe's culture and goals and that will also maximize economic growth and job creation. In addition, performance evaluation plans containing measures to monitor progress need to be developed. Comprehensive planning will clarify tribal goals and objectives for both Native Americans and Native Hawaiians and for potential lenders and investors, and with a formal strategic plan in place, the tribe can form a team to start new ventures or facilitate development of existing businesses.

In this way, tribes can implement a systematic and reliable approach to economic development that will allow them to proactively develop their business climate from within, rather than reacting to isolated opportunities from outside Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. Potential business partners and investors will be assured that that the tribe will continue to move in a given direction and that specific future initiatives will be implemented. For example, a housing developer will be reassured that a mall or office complex is planned for the near future in close proximity to a proposed new housing development.

III.B.2.ii. Develop New Ways to Access Capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

There are four potential sources of capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

- Tribal financial resources. Tribal survey respondents reported that they use their own resources to fund infrastructure on Indian Lands, tribally-owned businesses, economic development, and home construction and purchases.

- Federal and state government loans and grants. These are primarily used, according to survey respondents, to finance infrastructure on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, economic development, home construction, property redevelopment, and large businesses.

- Debt capital from banks. According to survey respondents, banks most commonly finance consumer purchases, home purchases, and micro businesses.

- External equity for business investment. According to CDFI Fund research, external equity investment is the least used form of financing on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

Accordingly, the workshop participants recommended that tribes and Native Hawaiian communities should develop their capacity to orchestrate and leverage all sources of capital, that financial institutions should develop new lending and financing products and revise underwriting criteria to meet the unique needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, and that micro lending programs for small business be developed, such as the Lakota Fund, located in Kyle, South Dakota.

III.B.2.iii. Increase Equity Investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

Roundtable participants suggested that having equity would help finance businesses directly and would also allow greater lending through leverage. Unfortunately, external equity investment, although widely used throughout the U.S. and in most countries around the world, has not been widely used on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Equity is a critical missing ingredient because equity investments often do not require the types of physical assets as collateral that loans or other types of credit financing require. In particular, equity does not require using land as security, and equity can thus provide money to businesses that do not qualify for loans but are still good investments.[23] Bankers provide liquidity and expansion capability to businesses with cash flow and collateral, whereas equity investors invest in management teams with credible business plans -- teams the investors expect to generate returns on their investments.

To improve access to equity capital, lenders and investors must understand Native American and Native Hawaiian communities and Native Americans and Native Hawaiians must understand how equity markets function -- what investors want and why. There are many sources of equity to suit different needs: Some companies evolve through one or more of these equity sources as the company changes and grows, whereas others may only use the type most applicable to them at the time they need it.

For business startups, equity is available for seed money. Incubators provide money, physical space, and expert advice on technical and management issues, and angel investors are often former successful entrepreneurs who enjoy participating in business start-ups. Angel investors contribute money and time, provide advice, and help with contacts, and they usually prefer to finance businesses in an industry in which they have experience.

Community development venture capital (CDVC) combines venture capital with high levels of technical assistance, similar to what incubators and angels provide. CDVC strives for both financial and social returns. CDVC has been a successful and growing approach, but is still a small part of the overall equity landscape, representing only about 0.01 percent of all private equity available in 2000.

Corporate venture capital funds may also invest in the early stage of a business that has a promising new technology or market approach. These early stage sources of equity would be ideal for Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses, but are currently not available.

Partnering with and receiving equity from corporations outside of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities has been used occasionally on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and could perhaps be more widely used. Corporate partnering offers not only financing, but also management skills, industry expertise, and informal networks to assist small businesses.

Other sources of equity include private placements, which are generally used for expansion, management buyouts, and bridge financing until the company can go public; initial public offerings and publicly traded stock, and merger-and-acquisition financing. Private equity can be used on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands for expanding established businesses, but the other forms of financing are probably less commonly applicable, at least initially.

[23]However, while it is true that equity investors may not require land of the business as collateral, it is common for equity venture capital investors to require that equity partners (in this case probably the Tribal residents who would serve as executives for the business) pledge their personal residence and personal assets and be liable as general partners in the business.

An infusion of equity capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands would aid development directly by funding new businesses and expanding existing ones, and it would also help indirectly by providing leverage to facilitate additional borrowing.

III.B.2.iv. Provide Access to Nontraditional Sources of Capital

During the Equity Investment Roundtable, the concept of Native American investment awareness was discussed in association with current and potential sources of financing. The sources, described in the meeting as "blips on the radar screen," were grouped into four financing types: Lending, early equity, venture capital, and mid-to-large cap equity. Tribal leaders and private investors suggested strategies that relied on accessing capital sources that have not traditionally been on the Native American investment "radar screen" and on expanding Native American awareness to include more equity and nontraditional financing and thus increase the chance of securing funding. Several potential strategies were discussed.

First, industry or industry sector-specific incubators could be created that provide full spectrum management and technical assistance on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and these incubators could be customized to meet the needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. For example, the HOPE project in Detroit has been successful in both training disadvantaged residents in automotive industry jobs and in helping to launch businesses that supply the automotive industry and provide on-the-job training to participants.

Second, existing angel investor networks could be utilized and, in addition, an Native American and Native Hawaiian angel network could be created. A relevant example of the latter is the Center of North America Capital Fund (CONAC), an angel investor network and investment fund that links two tribes -- the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa and the Spirit Lake Sioux -- with nationwide investors for investment in North Dakota. The CONAC Fund was modeled after Minnesota's Regional Angel Investor Networks (RAIN) Fund, a series of rural investment funds formed by the Minnesota Investment Network Corporation. In addition, the Small Business Administration offers ACE-net, a national Internet network of angel investors and entrepreneurs.

Third, community development venture capital funds can be used. For example, the Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation (KHIC) has succeeded in providing training and technical assistance to Appalachian entrepreneurs. The corporation helps the entrepreneur create a fundable business, management team, and business plan and invests equity in the business. In essence, KHIC incubates new businesses and then funds them with venture capital.

Fourth, state and city venture capital programs can be utilized. For example, Canada has succeeded in reaching out to its aboriginal (Native Canadian Indian) population with a number of financing programs and loan and venture capital offerings. The Business Development Bank of Canada (BDC) has dedicated the Growth Capital for Aboriginal Business loan program to aboriginal business needs, including management support and mentoring in alliance with CESO Aboriginal Services. The BDC program also offers a give-back feature under which a portion of interest is paid to a charity or community organization of the borrower's choice. The loans are offered to entrepreneurs for business startups and for expanding existing businesses.

Finally, a public/private intermediary could be formed to funnel funds to Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses. The intermediary approach has been used successfully in two different ways. In one instance, the Hopi Credit Association provides a bridge between banks and tribal borrowers. The credit union obtains funds from banks and handles all loan selection and servicing interaction with Native Americans, the banks deal with a responsible tribal credit union that understands banking needs, and the Native Americans are comfortable dealing with a credit union that understands their needs. In another case, the Southern Ute Growth Fund uses a partnership approach: The tribe co-invests, using its growth fund and capital provided by outside investors, in a variety of growth opportunities. This approach initially began with tribe's oil and gas business, and then expanded to other ventures.

III.B.2.v. Establish an Native American and Native Hawaiian Equity Fund

An emerging economy can find it difficult to become self-sustaining until adequate levels of private debt and equity capital are available to the businesses in that economy, and the roundtable participants felt that public funds can play an important role in this process. Since public funds can have the mission of developing a particular region, they can be provided on the basis of greater risk and lower returns than private sector investors are usually willing to accept. Historically, the public sector has often played a crucial role in investing in underdeveloped areas, and can help develop a critical mass of investment to encourage the private sector to invest.

Participants noted that the federal government has previously recognized the need to allocate grants directly to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities as equity investments. The BIA used to have a grant program to stimulate business activity on Indian Lands, but the program was terminated several years ago. The Economic Development Administration also had a Native American Program and budgeted funds specifically for Native American economic development. While this program achieved some success, it also has been terminated. The loss of the BIA and EDA programs reduced the flow of equity funds to Indian Lands, while Native American communities off Indian Lands, with the exception of Colonias, do not have set-asides. Non-Indian communities, both urban and rural, have a more diverse funding base that includes private support from foundations and non-profit organizations to fund equity for economic development. At present, Native American and Native Hawaiian communities do not have this option.

To attract equity to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, one option would be for the federal government to play an initial role by sponsoring an equity fund on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. This could help encourage private sector investors to invest in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands and could be combined with other incentives, such as guarantees, tax credits, or other risk-reduction measures.

In addition, there are several other initiatives that could help expand the availability of equity capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. One option would be to utilize community development venture capital funds, which, as noted earlier, seek a "double bottom line" of both financial and social returns. These funds have $300 million in total fund capitalization and by the end of 1999 had invested $104 million in equity in businesses within disadvantaged U.S. communities. Federal, state, and local governments generally provide about a quarter of the equity in these funds.[24]

Information on the financial performance of CDVCs is limited because most of the funds have been invested within the past ten years. Private equity funds typically raise funds and then liquidate their investments and return money to investors in ten-year increments; thus, reliable information on financial returns is not yet available. Funding from sources such as grants, foundation loans, and official aid does not require a market rate of financial return. However, while some private sector equity investors are willing to accept less-than-market returns for helping the community, their resources are limited.

The social returns sought by CDVCs vary, but are typically characterized by minority and women ownership, job creation, diversity in hiring, employment of residents in the targeted disadvantaged communities, quality benefits as part of compensation, and environmental criteria. Sensitivity to the culture of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities can also be built into the investment criteria of these funds.

Another option is public or public-private partnership equity funds. While their record has been mixed, valuable lessons have been learned from public sector sponsored funds, fund guarantees, and incentives of various types. Public and private sector partnership approaches, often joint funds with an intermediary, have proven successful. For example, several states, including Massachusetts and Oklahoma, have launched profitable, growing businesses that created jobs and a more diverse economy and, as discussed earlier, Canada has initiated a public venture capital fund, administered by the Business Development Bank of Canada, that has financed many aboriginal businesses.

III.C. Physical Infrastructure

III.C.1. Identification of Barriers

III.C.1.i. Lack of Physical and Telecommunications Infrastructure on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands

A serious lack of physical and telecommunications infrastructure[25] exists on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands .

- Only 47 percent of households on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands have telephones, compared to 94 percent for non-Native rural communities in the United States.[26]

- Twenty-six percent of tribes report that they do not have 911 services.[27]

- In rural areas (with populations of 2,500 or fewer), 12 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian households lack electricity and 23 percent do not have access to natural gas.[28]

- Only 22 percent of rural Native American households have cable television.

- Only nine percent of rural Native American households have personal computers, and of these, only eight percent have Internet access.[29]

- The unmet need for road and bridge improvements on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands is estimated at $6.8 billion.

[25]Physical infrastructure is defined as water, sewer, and electrical lines and roads; telecommunications infrastructure is defined as telephone, cable, and fiber optic lines.

[28] Ibid.

[29] Ibid.

- More than 66 percent of the Indian Reservation Roads (IRR) system consists of unimproved earth and gravel surfaces that wash out in severe weather, and 26 percent of IRR bridges are deficient. The annual fatality rate on these roads is more than four times the national average.[30]

Workshop participants expressed concern about infrastructure, and a recent study by New Mexico State University also found that tribes identified infrastructure as one of their top priorities.[31] The NMSU study of infrastructure needs on Indian Lands in the lower forty-eight states and Alaska found that "Tribes overwhelmingly identified their top investment priorities as housing, roads, wastewater technology, and medical facilities."[32]

Due to this inferior physical and telecommunications infrastructure:

- The cost of economic development is increased and private commercial development is retarded.
- Internet access is more expensive and more difficult to obtain in Native American communities.
- Tribes have difficulty establishing a tax base.
- Business startups face prohibitive costs, and economic activity on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands is limited to a large degree to service industries.
- The Native American and Native Hawaiian economies are not self-sustaining and creates relatively few jobs.

III.C.1.ii. Lack of Technical Assistance Resources

The study identified the lack of technical assistance and training as a serious barrier. Throughout the workshops, participants identified a variety of unmet training needs for tribal governments and Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs, Credit and investment issues have caused considerable misunderstanding between the financial community and Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. For example:

[31]Assessment of Technology Infrastructure in Native Communities, op. cit.

[32] Ibid.

- Tribes lack an understanding of credit principles, do not have uniform commercial codes, and do not have comprehensive development plans.
- The lending community does not understand the tribal community or tribal court systems.
- Tribes are not aware of federal agency programs that can assist in meeting tribal needs.
- Federal and state agency resources and regulations are confusing and need better coordination.
- Tribal court personnel require training in civil credit and contract law.

The lack of understanding and of appropriate training has resulted in perceptions of risk, and misunderstandings have led to credit being withheld from creditworthy individuals and deserving communities on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. All stakeholders would benefit from technical assistance and training that facilitate greater access to lending and investments in Native American communities. The consensus of the workshops was that a lack of technical assistance results in tribes and villages having limited capacity building opportunities, in Native American economies falling farther behind the mainstream U.S. economy, in business start-ups having a high failure rate, and in delaying Native American exposure to the modern financial services sector.

III.C.2. Potential Remedies

III.C.2.i. Create Innovative Strategies to Develop Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands Infrastructure

The adequacy of current Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands physical infrastructure -- water, sewer, electricity, telecommunications, gas, and other utilities -- must be assessed. However, our research determined that, at present, no work is under way to identify present and future commercial and industrial infrastructure needs within Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

The Indian Health Service (IHS) provides some water and sewer services to individual Native American families, but IHS assesses only current domestic water and sewer needs, not commercial and industrial infrastructure needs. The Environmental Protection Agency has examined Native American and Native Hawaiian infrastructure, but only for domestic requirements, and did not address commercial and industrial requirements.

Infrastructure must be in place if Native American and Native Hawaiian economies are to develop and create jobs, but absent commercial-grade infrastructure, projects proposed for financing are frequently rejected. Various possible initiatives were explored at the workshops to facilitate development of an infrastructure system capable of supporting commercial and industrial needs on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

- Conduct a commercial and industrial infrastructure assessment to determine infrastructure needs throughout Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. This could be similar to the EPA and IHS domestic surveys.

- Create partnerships between tribal governments and private developers to plan for comprehensive infrastructure development, including information technology needs.

- Help develop a federal infrastructure investment strategy that utilizes available federal resources and encourages private partnerships to participate in the funding and development process.

- Set aside infrastructure funding comparable in concept to that which is used in providing Colonias with infrastructure funds.[33]

- Assess the feasibility of creating an entity similar to the Rural Community Assistance Project (RCAP) that would focus on infrastructure development in rural Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

Workshop participants noted that two significant initiatives have already been undertaken by the federal government:

- The Federal Communications Commission has agreed to increase assistance to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians through the Lifeline and Link Up programs, and will conduct outreach to ensure that they are familiar with these programs and know how to qualify for them. FCC has also changed its auction rules to increase incentives for wireless carriers to serve tribal lands, and will streamline the process for telecommunications companies to receive universal-service support in serving tribal lands.[34]

[33]There is a program in the Department of Agriculture to fund infrastructure development in Colonias -- small, remote communities on or near the US-Mexico border with limited infrastructure.

- The Tribal Surface Transportation Act of 2000 authorized $1.6 billion over six years for the Federal Highway Administration to establish 12 tribal demonstration projects (one in each BIA region) to allow tribal governments to build roads and bridges.

Another opportunity may exist through the Indian Financing Act, under which tribes may issue tax-exempt bonds for "essential government functions" that state and local governments would customarily provide -- including infrastructure. However, most tribes do not have the ability to service tax-exempt bond debt: While tribes as sovereigns have the right to tax, they suffer from a tax base that is inadequate to finance infrastructure. Thus, there exists the conundrum that until more infrastructure is constructed, there will be little development, but until more development occurs, there will not be a tax base sufficient to finance the infrastructure.

A number of mechanisms exist to finance infrastructure, including loans from tribal trust funds, loans to tribes from revolving credit funds (established in section 10 of the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934), loans for infrastructure development pursuant to the Indian Financing Act, Tribal (general obligation) bonds, publicly issued and traded tribal bonds, revenue bonds, joint ventures with the private sector, and grants. However, most of these are based on some form of debt, and most tribes do not have a tax base that would enable them to qualify for loans or bonds.

III.C.2.ii. Expand Technical Assistance and Training

From the workshops, a number of potential initiatives were identified for increasing the availability of technical assistance and training on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

- Provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians with financial literacy training that will allow them to understand basic finance and credit principles.

- Help tribes develop comprehensive strategic economic development plans to meet development and financing needs.

- Assist lenders, investors, and potential business partners in developing an understanding of tribal laws, tribal enforcement capabilities, and lender rights regarding the credit and/or investments extended to tribes and residents of trust lands.

- Help lenders, investors, and potential business partners understand federal programs, requirements, and application processes.

[34]"Federal Communications Commission Takes Steps to Promote Access to Telecommunications on Tribal Lands", Federal Communications Commission, June 8, 2000, p.1.

- Create mechanisms for federal agencies to methodically review regulations, to work with tribes to assist in economic development, and to focus on finance and resources.

Examples of the suggested types of training required include:

- Workshops on consumer and business finance principles.
- Customizing economic development plans for individual tribes.
- Workshops on financial institution needs that convey an understanding of tribal court systems.
- Workshops to help tribes promote legal infrastructures; for example, teaching the rationale behind the development of uniform commercial codes.

One potentially useful strategy could be to develop technical assistance resources for small business owners on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Small business finance and entrepreneurship training and education alone are not enough to create financial opportunities on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, for entrepreneurs and small-business owners often require assistance in applying the training to their unique situation. However, few such technical assistance resources exist on these Lands. Moreover, the survey indicated that Native Americans and Native Hawaiians with access to counseling, training, and/or technical-assistance resources are more likely to rate financial products and services as easier to obtain.

Recommended actions include:

- Development of small business incubators, resource centers, "one-stop shops," and community development financial institutions to provide technical assistance.
- Development of small-business resource centers to coordinate with BusinessLinc (a public-private mentoring partnership program) and facilitate mentoring relationships.
- Use of circuit riders or loaned staff to train tribal and inter-tribal office staffs, if full-time staff cannot be provided for a small business resource center nonprofits.
- Creation of regional business resource centers funded by federal, tribal, and private sources.

Examples of such assistance include the SBA Micro Loan program, the SBA Tribal Business Information Centers, and technical assistance programs for program borrowers such as the Hopi Credit Association, the Lakota Fund, and the Alaska Growth Capital (BIDCO).

Another useful strategy may be to coordinate technical assistance resources by establishing a national clearinghouse of training and technical assistance resources relating to lending and investment, developing a training package that includes planning models relevant to tribal business opportunities, and conducting regional forums and inviting tribal businesses to test plans against panels of experts.

The basic financial training discussed above can be further strengthened with student internships and with exchanges for adults. Internships for Native American and Native Hawaiian students with financial regulatory agencies and with financial institutions could be an effective way for students to obtain financial training and job skills. In addition, tribal government professionals could utilize exchange programs and details or rotations in cabinet and regulatory agencies to improve their financial skills. An exchange could be particularly useful because it will allow federal and FSO staff to gain understanding of the workings and needs of tribal governments. Actions recommended by workshop participants include enhanced recruitment of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians by financial institutions and establishment of Federal and private sector internships, exchange programs, technical assistance and training programs, personal finance and entrepreneurship education programs, and college and graduate school student programs in business, finance, and economics.

Finally, the participants also recommended the development of mentoring programs with industry. Mentoring has existed on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, but not to the degree necessary to close the equity capital gap, and would involve educating tribal entrepreneurs on the decision criteria and processes used by equity investment fund boards, chambers of commerce, and industry and trade groups.

III.D. Financial and Governmental Barriers

III.D.1. Identification of Barriers

III.D.1.i. Lack of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands or Native Hawaiian Communities

CDFI Fund research found that:

- Only 14 percent of communities on Indian Lands or in Native Hawaiian communities have a financial institution in their community.

- Fewer than half of these communities have a financial institution nearby, and only about half have an easily accessible ATM.

- Fifteen percent of the residents of these communities must travel more than 100 miles to reach the nearest bank or ATM.

In communities that lack financial institutions, individuals needing credit must often rely on sub-prime lenders who charge high fees for their services. In addition, the absence of financial service providers reinforces the cash and barter system of trade and contributes to Native Americans' and Native Hawaiians' unfamiliarity with financial institutions and the contemporary financial services culture. The impacts of this lack of financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands are substantial:

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians' access to even basic banking services is limited, and they must leave tribal lands to obtain these services.

- Financial services are costly for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians.

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have limited opportunity to acquire financial expertise or the capacity and experience to manage community based financial institutions.

- Many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have either no credit history or a poor credit history that prevents them from qualifying for loans.

III.D.1.ii. Uncertainty Generated by Changes in Tribal Government Leadership

Just as with any type of election, when a new tribal administration is elected, the new elected officials may eliminate plans for new businesses, plans that have been in place for a long time. This represents one kind of economic disruption resulting from tribal government process, but other government-caused uncertainties also exist. For example, in addition to governing duties, tribal governments -- unlike most other governments -- own and often operate tribal business enterprises, over which tribal political appointees may have responsibility for day-to-day operations. The incentives that motivate tribal governments are different from those of private business owners, and separating business management from tribal governance is thus necessary to prevent conflicts of interest and inefficient management. In addition, the management capabilities of tribal governmental staff need to be enhanced, and the civil service corps must be made more independent of the tribal political leadership.

Uncertainties resulting from changes in tribal government leadership imply that tribal businesses may not operate efficiently because management emphasizes meeting political goals instead of business goals, tribal entrepreneurs can get frustrated and move their businesses out of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, and lenders and investors invest less in tribal businesses.

III.D.1.iii. Historical Absence of Trust Between Tribes and Banks

The national survey of tribes and financial service organizations (FSOs) found significant differences in perception between the two respondent groups, and the differences involved difficulty of accessing financial products and services. There has been a historical lack of trust between Native Americans and Native Hawaiians and FSOs, and this has caused misunderstandings that lead to failed negotiations for loans, cultural isolation and increased costs of doing business for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, and a reluctance on the part of banks to underwrite loans.

III.D.2. Potential Remedies

III.D.2.i. Increase the Number of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

The survey of tribal organizations and FSOs identified the lack of Indian Land and Hawaiian Home Land-based financial institutions as a serious problem, and, unlike mainstream communities, Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands are not generally served by a variety of financial institutions. In the survey, 33 percent of tribal respondents indicated that they had to travel at least 30 miles to reach an ATM or a bank branch, and many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have difficulty in accessing any form of banking service. This lack of basic financial services has implications for financial literacy, capacity building, and banker-customer communication, it exacerbates the capital access gap, and it increases the difficulty of starting new businesses and acquiring home mortgages.

Workshop participants noted that several different approaches have been used to address the lack of access to financial services: A few Tribes have formed agreements with banks to build branch banks on their land, some tribes and some Native American non-profits have started revolving loan funds (some are CDFIs), and some tribal governments have instituted a government run revolving loan fund. In addition, a Native Hawaiian organization is chartering a new bank.

Importantly, workshop participants strongly felt that the creation of community based financial institutions in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities should be give high priority, and CDFIs were identified as a crucial and underutilized potential resource. No single financial institution model will address the needs of all Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, but establishing and expanding CDFIs on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands offers important advantages, for they can provide a lending or investment fund that can employ people from the community. In addition, CDFIs provide an opportunity to develop partnership programs between tribes, other financial institutions, equity investors, and federal agencies.

To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, a number of policies need to be considered, including creating more financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, expanding and/or rebuilding existing financial institutions on the Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, purchasing existing banks, and creating community development financial institutions. There are several examples of successful initiatives:

- On the Cheyenne River Sioux Reservation, the tribe used an existing revolving loan fund to create the non-profit Four Bands Community Fund, that provides loans to businesses.

- In 1990, the Navajo Nation had only three bank branches and one ATM serving a geographic area of 17 million acres. To increase the availability of financial services on the reservation, the tribe entered into an agreement with Norwest Bank (now Wells Fargo) to build four new branch banks, hire and train Navajo personnel, and target financing to business startups and housing development.

- In all, nine tribal-owned commercial banks, seven credit unions, and fourteen loan funds have been developed nationwide to serve tribal communities.

- Hawaiian Community Assets, Inc. is developing a charter for Bank Aloha, the first Native Hawaiian-owned bank.

- The CDFI Fund has certified 34 community development financial institutions that have Native American and Native Hawaiian communities in their service areas, and five of these are located on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

III.D.2.ii. Develop Regional Financial Institutions

The stakeholders believe that regional partnerships and alliances are essential to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and this perception was robust across stakeholder groups and in all phases of the study. There are several factors that drove the recommendation for building financial institutions around a regional focus:

- The Fund used 13 regional Native American, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian organizations as co-sponsors for the regional workshops.

- The federal agencies that regulate financial institutions (the Federal Reserve System, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, National Credit Union Administration, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and Office of Thrift Supervision) have regional and district offices.

- Investors and venture capitalists are concentrated in several regions.

- There are models for regional financing partnerships that can be considered and adapted to meet the needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

- Tribes and tribal organizations can coordinate with federal agency financial assistance providers at the regional level for initiatives such as SBICs or CDFIs.

- Regional partnerships and alliances can address the economies of scale needed for small or newly recognized tribes with small populations that do not have the necessary legal, economic, and physical infrastructure necessary to support financial institutions.

Possible strategies include building on partnerships established with the Fund's regional workshop cosponsors[35] and other inter-tribal organizations and holding follow-up forums similar to those conducted in this study; establishing information clearinghouses at the regional level on model financing approaches, on how to access equity capital, and on sources of training and technical assistance; and providing channels of information to tribal communities so that they can adapt model approaches to their unique cultural setting. Another approach would be to establish regional partnerships with banks, lending institutions, venture capitalists, federal agencies, and tribes/inter-tribal organizations and to:

- Conduct regional forums to assist tribal businesses in identifying types and sources of financing that best serve a given enterprise.

- Create financing intermediaries that provide regional and local assistance to tribes and tribal entrepreneurs.

- Develop technical and underwriting standards at the regional level that can be adapted to varying tribal business environments.

Examples of successful regional initiatives include:

[35] See Chapter II, pages 23-24, for the list of the fourteen cosponsors.

- The Native American Development Corporation -- NADC is a nonprofit CDFI that provides Native American business communities in Montana and Wyoming with funds to create jobs, develop long-term economic self-sufficiency, and facilitate access to capital. Its Capital Loan Fund was initially capitalized with funding from banks, the federal government, First Nations Development Institute, and private corporations.

- The Native American Lending Group, Inc. -- NALG is a nonprofit multi-tribe community based financial institution in New Mexico that serves 19 Pueblo communities. It was created to provide Native American tribes, businesses, and individuals access to private investment capital.

- The Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation -- KHIC is a CDFI that was originally funded in 1968 with a federal grant. KHIC's purpose is to provide venture capital investments to business startups and expanding enterprises located in southern and eastern Kentucky, and its partners include federal and state agencies, traditional venture capital organizations and foundations.

- Coastal Enterprises, Inc. -- CEI is a nonprofit CDFI serving low-income communities in Maine, and it provides financial and technical assistance for development and expansion of industries, small businesses, housing, and social services. CEI mobilizes private and public resources to support projects and to facilitate self-determination and empowerment of communities, and it serves as a model for similar initiatives in the private and public sectors.

III.D.2.iii. Educate Lenders and Investors Concerning Native American and Native Hawaiian Governments and Cultures

Many bankers and investors do not understand how tribes operate. Financial organizations do not understand sovereignty and sovereign immunity, how the tribal governments function, what tribal laws are, and what tribal court procedures are, nor do they usually understand Native cultures or markets. Further, unfortunate stereotypes and discrimination can distort lending and investing decisions. It is thus important that federal and nonprofit partners who wish to develop self-sustaining economies on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands educate lenders and investors about Native American governments, cultures, and institutions.

III.E. Educational and Cultural Barriers

III.E.1. Identification of Barriers

III.E.1.i. Lack of Knowledge or Experience With the Financial World on the Part of Tribes and Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

In Native American and Native Hawaiian economies, most transactions have been traditionally conducted using cash. Many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians thus lack an understanding of banking, credit reporting, and loan qualification processes and standards and have difficulty obtaining credit because they have no credit history or, in some cases, a bad credit history. Moreover, Native American residents of Indian Lands and Native Hawaiians often lack knowledge and experience in preparing the business plans required for bank financing, and their inexperience with the requirements and expectations for different types of loans exacerbates the situation. In Addition, many are unfamiliar with how financial markets work, how to make equity financing choices, and what investors require.

Furthermore, equity has not traditionally been a tribal focus for capital. While Tribes are beginning to reinvest their funds as equity in new businesses, accepting external equity is still often a foreign concept. Native American and Native Hawaiian cultures have not traditionally been profit-driven, and the tribal government's objective is often job creation to address immediate unemployment problems. In the past, some unscrupulous salespeople have offered unprofitable investments to the tribes, creating a history of distrust. This is often exacerbated when a non-Native investor or lender requires that the Tribe relinquish ownership and control as part of the deal.

In evaluating potential funding opportunities, bankers and equity investors analyze the loan applicant's management skills, financial knowledge, and business planning ability. Equity investors also require that applicants seeking investment capital have a business plan, which is an unfamiliar concept to many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Before they even apply for capital, Native Americans and Native Hawaiians need assistance with strategic, business, and financial planning. Roundtable participants noted that the consequences of inexperience with the financial services sector can be serious:

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians do not establish credit histories or have poor credit histories that disqualify them from many loans, and they tend to have relatively high loan default rates.

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians can be vulnerable to predatory lenders.

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians can be subject to high financial service costs that are passed on in high interest rates on loans.

- Tribes are often not able to adequately leverage their resources, because lenders ask them for excessive guarantees for loans to tribal enterprises.

Similarly, the implications of a lack of understanding of private equity can also be serious: Tribes do not approach equity investors and do not know how to locate them, Native American and Native Hawaiian business proposals are not funded if they do not meet equity investors' goals, even if the proposals meet tribal goals, and Native Americans and Native Hawaiians often do not know how to package deals for consideration, and are thus not successful in obtaining funds.

III.E.1.ii. Differences Between Native American Culture and the Banking Culture

The difference between Native American, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian cultures, on the one hand, and the contemporary financial and investment culture on the other is most obvious in differing views of wealth and sharing. Mainstream banking and investor cultures value the profit motive and the accumulation of assets whose worth can be evaluated. Credit worthiness is determined by an individual's accumulated wealth, income stream, controlling assets, and credit history, and land is an asset with a value that is determined by "objective" standards -- it belongs to individuals and can be legally transferred. Statistics and data are considered "objective" and valuable and heavily influence decision-making.

In contrast, most Native American communities are built on interdependence, connectedness, and resource sharing. Generosity and giving away one's possessions is a mark of Native American wealth, and individual wealth accumulation is a foreign concept in many tribal cultures. A Native American's credit worthiness is determined by his or her character and the relationship between the lender and the borrower, and the "lender" may not expect to be repaid. Land is held communally, it belongs to everyone, and is valued as home to the community. The soil is literally made of the bones of the community's ancestors. As such, the community has a relationship to the land that may span thousands of years, and it is illogical to use it as collateral for an asset like a home or office building.

In the workshops, tribal and village representatives discussed the importance of maintaining their cultures and the difficulties Native Americans and Native Hawaiians encounter when trying to establish new policies and procedures that fulfill lender and investor demands and expectations. Failure on the part of FSOs to understanding or compensate for these differences makes relationship-building and contracting difficult.

III.E.1.iii. Poor Understanding of Tribal Sovereignty and Sovereign Immunity

In the United States, no government may be sued unless that government consents. Federal, state, and municipal governments took decades to develop rules by which to waive sovereign immunity, and the courts took years to qualify and modify those rules. However, Tribal governments and the courts are only now addressing these sovereignty issues.

Lenders and investors do not understand tribal and village sovereignty and sovereign immunity, and are thus often reluctant to conduct business on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands because they fear that they will not be able to recover assets or enforce contracts in the event of a default or a bankruptcy. Further, a number of lenders and investors have tried to make loans in Native American communities and have been unsuccessful because they underestimated the time required or did not adequately address community concerns, and their colleagues are understandably hesitant to make similar efforts. Nevertheless, lack of understanding of tribal sovereignty and sovereign immunity implies that lenders and investors may not pursue deals on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. In addition, internal divisions within the Native American community can slow development when a lender or investor demands a waiver of sovereign immunity.

III.E.1.iv. Discrimination Against and/or Stereotyping of Native American Communities

Native Americans and Native Hawaiians suffer from stereotyping and discrimination. This plays out in many ways, from the subtle to the overt; ranging from from the types of misunderstandings and missteps that occur when two individuals raised with different values try to communicate with each other to overt redlining and discriminatory lending practices. Most discrimination today is subtle, and surfaces as less outreach to tribal communities than to mainstream communities and as lenders inadvertently or purposefully making prospective Native American and Native Hawaiian borrowers feel unwelcome and uncomfortable. In addition, few persons in the Native American and Native Hawaiian communities are familiar enough with federal and state consumer protection and fair lending laws to address potential discrimination in lending.

The impacts of stereotyping and discrimination are serious: Lenders, investors, and Native Americans and Native Hawaiians distrust one another, prospective Native American borrowers who may be able to qualify do not even apply for loans or seek investments, and fewer small businesses are started.

III.E.1.v. Failure of Lenders to Understand Tribal Government or Legal Systems

Tribes and villages have different forms of government organization, and governments range from a few elected officials with no staff, to large government organizations with three fully-developed branches of government and large professional staffs, managers, and thousands of employees. Like state governments, these sovereigns operate according to laws and regulations enforced through tribal court systems.

Many lenders and investors have had limited exposure to tribal operations, regulations, and enforcement. They are concerned about not being able to collect on their debts or fear that the process of doing so will be complex and difficult. As a result, lenders do not reach out to Native American markets, lenders and tribes and individual Native Americans misunderstand each other, lenders establish polices based on misconceptions, and few loans are made.

III.E.2. Potential Remedies

III.E.2.i. Expand Financial Education for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

As discussed above, one of the most significant barriers to lending and investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands is that many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians lack adequate financial and business skills. Many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians do not understand the needs and expectations of banks, the role played by credit-reporting agencies, and investor decision-making criteria. According to tribal respondents in the CDFI Fund's survey, appropriate education and training are not being provided, and they rated the lack of such training as the most significant barrier to accessing financial products and services. In addition, education and training were recurring themes in the strategies survey respondents suggested to address barriers to obtaining financial products and services. Workshop participants identified the following educational barriers Native American and Native Hawaiian communities encounter in attracting investment:

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians lack knowledge of or experience with the financial world,
- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians do not understand the private equity market, and
- historical distrust and a lack of relationships exist between FSOs and Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

The strategy for addressing these barriers is to provide financial education for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, and personal finance and small business finance education can provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians the means to participate in the mainstream economy. Such education can enhance economic and community development efforts on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands by giving individuals the expertise to shape their own and their communities' economic futures. The financial literacy curriculum is readily available from various sources, although lessons may need to be adapted for Native American and Native Hawaiian students. First Nations Development Institute, in partnership with the Fannie Mae Foundation, has developed a personal finance curriculum that is tailored to the Native American community, and the Treasury Department participates in a consortium that provides financial literacy training and community development services to Native American communities.[36]

The actions recommended include:

- Establishment of teaching partnerships with tribal and non-tribal colleges, financial institutions, nonprofits, and CDFIs.
- Incorporation of Web-based training in the curriculum.
- Facilitation of funding and teacher recruitment through the private sector, tribes, inter-tribal organizations, and federal agencies.

An example of available resources and a successful programs is the financial literacy materials developed by First Nations and the Fannie Mae Foundation

III.E.2.ii. Develop Entrepreneurship Programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

Entrepreneurs and small business owners are essential to the development of Native American and Native Hawaiian economies; however, the skills that make a good mechanic or restaurateur are qualitatively different from the financial, marketing, and personnel development skills required of a successful entrepreneur. An entrepreneurial training program and a small business finance education program can help bridge this gap.

Educational curricula can be adapted to fit elementary-to-high-school educational programs, and workshop participants recommended teaching entrepreneurial skills to both school children and adults. Entrepreneurship programs in high school can be reinforced with business development programs, such as Junior Achievement, where young people learn to start small businesses, and core materials on personal finance, small business finance, and entrepreneurship can be developed.

An Example of a successful program is the American Indian Business Leaders entrepreneurial training program for Native American high school and college students.[37]

III.E.2.iii. Conduct Lender and Investor Education

One initiative suggested by workshops participants is to develop educational programs on tribal economies and markets. Lending and financial organizations are not aware of many tribal market opportunities, business successes, and emerging entrepreneurs. The physical and cultural distance between Native American and Native Hawaiian communities and the centers of equity investment contribute to investors' lack of information, as does stereotyping of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians -- the same holds true for the lack of financial institution presence on Indian Lands and in Native Hawaiian communities. However, the regional workshops and national roundtable discussions revealed that stakeholders are interested in continuing the information and education exchanges begun here. Specific actions recommended by the participants include:

- Development of handbooks on tribal government structures and procedures, sovereignty and sovereign immunity, land status, subsistence living, and Native American culture, protocol, and etiquette; on tribal laws, and regulatory/licensing requirements; and on financing and economic development needs.

- Creation of a directory of tribal credit officers, economic development officers, and department heads and a directory of attorneys qualified to practice in tribal courts.

- Development of a general marketing campaign that illustrates effective practices and success stories by implementing awards programs, such as Honoring Nations (Harvard University's annual awards for innovative tribal and village government programs).

- The initiation of educational seminars by Native American and Native Hawaiian communities to introduce themselves and of road shows focusing on Native American and Native Hawaiian business investment opportunities.

- Creation of speakers bureaus through extension services, chambers of commerce, tribal community colleges, and inter-tribal organizations and Alaska Native regional corporations.

[37]The program is headquartered at the University of Montana at Missoula.

- Development of web-based databases that include economic and institutional profiles of Native American communities, federal programs that may be available to support projects, and lending and investment resources the community offers.

Another strategy recommended at the workshops was to develop cultural awareness and anti-discrimination programs and educational initiatives, including:

- Development of educational materials about fair lending laws and creation of forums to present these materials to Native American and Native Hawaiian audiences.

- Development of educational materials about discrimination and about cultural awareness, and creation of forums to present these materials to lenders, investors, and state and federal officials.

- Enforcement of fair lending laws and the Community Reinvestment Act in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities through partnerships with financial institutions, government and non-profit organizations, and federal and state regulators

- Creation of mechanisms for recourse, dispute resolution, and reconciliation, and of an advocacy agency to follow up on complaints.

An example cited by the participants is the Salish-Kootenai Tribal College Cultural Education Program.

IV. CONCLUSIONS

IV.A. The Economic Potential of Native American and Native Hawaiian Communities

Despite the current depressed conditions on many Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, there are options for achieving higher rates of economic growth in the future; however, one of the prerequisites for this is the infusion of additional capital. This study identified the key barriers to access to capital and their impact, and developed strategies and actions to overcome these barriers.

Native American and Native Hawaiian communities have the potential for becoming an important domestic emerging market in the U.S., growing more rapidly than the U.S. as a whole:

- The Native American and Native Hawaiian populations have grown 50 percent faster than the U.S. population overall over the last five years and are expected to increase at double the U.S. rate over the next three decades.

- Native American-owned businesses have been growing at seven times the growth rate of all firms in the U.S. and have been increasing sales at more than double the U.S. rate. Native American-owned business revenues increased 55 percent a year from 1987-1992 and are expected to continue to grow at double digit rates.

- Native American and Native Hawaiian buying power has doubled over the past decade.

- The purchasing power of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians is currently estimated to be $35 billion and, with roughly half of the Native American and Native Hawaiian populations living on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, Native American and Native Hawaiian purchasing power totals about $17 billion.

- Estimated revenue on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands totals approximately $25 billion.

- Native American businesses can be found in a variety of industries, including gaming/resorts, natural resources, services, construction, manufacturing, and wholesale and retail trade.

IV.B. The Lack of Capital

Native American and Native Hawaiian economic development is restricted by limited access to credit and equity capital. There are four primary sources of capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands: Internal resources, government grants, credit capital (primarily loans), and equity from external investors, and this study focused primarily on access to credit. However, study participants also suggested a related focus on equity capital, since many of the same issues arise when examining access to equity as for access to credit, and additional equity would make it easier to provide credit to Native American firms.

Most forms of externally provided equity have not been viewed in the Native American community as potential sources of capital, and Native American and Native Hawaiian communities receive only a small fraction of total U.S. equity funding:

- Native American and Native Hawaiian communities are estimated to have $10 Billion in equity capital -- only 0.06 percent of the U.S. total.

- We estimate that there may be an equity investment gap ion Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands of about $10 billion, and that the $10 billion in equity currently believed to be in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands should total approximately $20 billion, based on comparable demographic and economic circumstances.

- The gap between the current equity capital investment in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands and proportionate U.S. levels is even higher, and totals $44 billion.

IV.C. Barriers and Potential Remedies

Study participants identified a number of barriers to increasing the availability of equity capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and these barriers involved tribes, investors, financial institutions, government, and the workings of the market. The following barriers were identified, in order of importance:

- Legal issues regarding Tribal governmental rules, regulations, and codes

- The historical lack of profitability and adequate returns on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

- Reluctance of equity investors to reach out to tribes or Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses

- Lack of articulated, agreed-on, consistent tribal visions and goals
- The dual role of tribal governments in governing and business management
- Bureaucratic "red tape" and slow decision-making from tribal government
- Lack of tribal administrative capacity and business skills -- especially financial literacy, business planning, and an understanding of equity markets
- Lack of market and trade information about Native American and Native Hawaiian communities
- Inadequate physical infrastructure
- Lack of training and technical assistance
- Issues involving tribal sovereignty and sovereign immunity
- The scarcity of investors located on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Ignorance of the advantages of investing on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Uncoordinated and inconsistent federal support for business and economic development, management training, and technical assistance activities on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

The study participants also identified potential strategies for overcoming the barriers:

- Clarify tribal legal codes and framework, protection, and dispute resolution -- including sovereign immunity waiver clarification and judicial remedies and judicial independence.
- Expand equity fund presence on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands through sponsoring internal equity investors and bringing in external equity investors.

- Establish public/private intermediaries to develop community or regional level equity programs.

- Establish tribal net income reinvestment policies for the same tribe's or other tribes' businesses and infrastructure.

- Create clusters of related or supporting businesses.

- Improve the physical and telecommunications infrastructures.

- Provide entrepreneurial training.

- Develop a strategic view of tribal goals and development strategy.

- Expand the administrative capacity of tribal governments, especially financial literacy and strategic and business planning.

- Introduce community-based finance on a local basis.

- Separate the goals and management of tribal business and government.

- Increase the efficiency of federal agency interactions with tribes.

- Promote investment through investment guidebooks, web sites, and "investment road shows" highlighting Native American and Native Hawaiian business opportunities

IV.D. Potential Initiatives, Strategies, and Actions

One of the first initiatives that should be undertaken is to obtain more reliable economic and financial information on Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. Information is required on GDP and GDP growth in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, the numbers and types of tribal enterprises and other businesses in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, total capital of various types, unmet capital requirements, investment experience and risk perceptions, tribes' development goals, and the specific types of management training and administrative capacity building required. Study participants suggested that the federal government, in conjunction with tribes, could develop a plan for obtaining this information.

Any Initiatives undertaken should begin with a community focus at the tribal or regional level, and key strategies include:

- Determining tribal strategic goals

- Clarifying the legal and regulatory climate on Indian Lands and creating an impartial judiciary
- Developing enhanced financial and business literacy and expertise
- Enhancing administrative and planning capacities
- Developing options for securing Tribal non-monetary resources such as forests, oil and gas, and mineral reserves to promote funding
- Designing a reinvestment strategy for income from Tribal assets
- Developing peer- or community-based equity structures
- Increasing the number of banks and bank branches and other CDFIs on Indian Lands
- Establishing networks with potential equity investors
- Creating, expanding and improving the physical infrastructure of roads, water, sewer systems, and telecommunications

Lenders and investors need to be made aware of Native American and Native Hawaiian business opportunities and advantages, and need assistance navigating the new territory of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities:

- The single most frequent reason investors cited for why they do not invest in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands was that the opportunity never arose and they were never approached by any Native American or Native Hawaiian business people.
- Education about Native American and Native Hawaiian culture and structure, lending and investment opportunities, markets, and labor markets provided to banks, equity investors, and major corporations.
- Investment pre-screening and filtering of the best opportunities, post-investment tracking, and assistance with regulations are valuable services tribes can provide to investors and lenders.

Current forms of mainstream equity finance may not apply to most Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses, and there is thus a mismatch between most private equity financing and the greatest needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses. To remedy this, angel investors and venture capitalists could fund startup or small to medium-sized businesses in high-tech fields, while later-stage private equity could be used to expand established, successful businesses with the potential for high growth. Nevertheless, the majority of small, "mom and pop" or medium- to slow-growth companies, especially those in remote areas, can only attract equity with a public or social benefit component.

Approaches used elsewhere in the U.S and which could adapted to the needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities could be used, such as:

- Industry or sector-specific incubators with a full complement of management training and technical assistance, perhaps tied to various federal, state, and local programs
- Angel investor networks
- Community development venture capital
- Strategic partnerships with corporate America

In fact, there have been numerous partnerships in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands with corporations, but this approach could be used even more widely if some of the barriers to equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands are addressed.

A frequent suggestion made by the study participants was to create a public-private intermediary that would liaison between the federal government and investors on one hand, and the tribes or regions on the other. This intermediary could create a network of deals and investors, mentor entrepreneurs and business owners, and manage or co-invest in investments. The intermediary would provide the needed technical assistance, but would try to locate or create investments that are likely to generate a reasonable rate of return. Existing examples of intermediaries linking business communities with potential investors could serve as templates for such an intermediary.

IV.E. Examples of Successful Initiatives and Programs

One of the more important contributions of this study was the identification of programs and initiatives currently underway involving government, the private sector, and tribes that address the major barriers identified. Examples of some of these are given below.

As noted, study participants recommended a strategy of creating a more pro-business environment on Indian Lands, through such actions as establishment of a tribal legal infrastructure for business development, and examples of initiatives that have already been implemented include:

- The Tribal Commercial Code (UCC), developed by the Navajo Nation, Crow Tribe, Hoopa Valley Tribe, Lummi Indian Nation, Northern Cheyenne Tribe, Cheyenne River, Mille Lacs Band, Rosebud Sioux Tribe, and Standing Rock Sioux.

- The Tribal Land Use and Planning Code, developed by the Navajo Nation, Cabazon Band of Mission Indians, and Gila River Indian Community.

- Tribal Zoning Codes, developed by the Navajo Nation, Colville, Muckleshoot, and Menominee.

- Building Codes, developed by the Colorado River Standing Rock Sioux and the Navajo Nation.

- Tribal Corporation Codes, developed by the Navajo Nation, Cherokee Nation, Oklahoma, and the Hoopa Valley Tribe.

- Tribal Housing Codes, model codes developed by the HUD Office of Native American Programs.

Workshop participants noted that lenders and investors are often reluctant to accept the jurisdiction of tribal courts to enforce financial contracts, and to address this problem, the strategy recommended was to increase the capacity of tribal courts to resolve commercial and financial disputes and to enforce commercial codes. Some initiatives are currently underway:

- Approximately 247 tribal court systems have been established, including several appellate courts and four supreme courts, and Inter-tribal appellate courts.

- The Bureau of Justice Assistance, U.S. Department of Justice, and BIA are currently funding technical assistance and training grants.

- The National American Indian Court Judges Association has established the National Tribal Justice Resource Center to assist tribes in strengthening methods of self-government and to provide technical assistance for enhancing tribal justice systems.

- The Tribal Court Clearinghouse has been created as a resource for tribal court development, training, court review, code drafting, and training.

Tribal leaders and private investors suggested strategies that relied on accessing capital sources that have not traditionally been on the Native American investment "radar screen" and on expanding Native American awareness to include more equity and nontraditional financing and thus increase the likelihood of securing funding. Several potential strategies were discussed:

- Industry or industry sector-specific incubators could be created that provide management and technical assistance, and incubators in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands could also be customized for use in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. For example, the HOPE project in Detroit has been successful in training disadvantaged residents in automotive industry jobs and in helping to launch businesses that supply the automotive industry and provide on-the-job training.

- Existing angel investor networks could be utilized and a Native American and Native Hawaiian angel network could be created. For example, the Center of North America Capital Fund is an angel investor network and investment fund that links two tribes -- the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa and the Spirit Lake Sioux -- with nationwide investors for investment in North Dakota. The CONAC Fund was modeled after Minnesota's Regional Angel Investor Networks Fund, a series of rural investment funds formed by the Minnesota Investment Network Corporation.

- Community development venture capital funds can be used. For example, the Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation provides training and technical assistance to Appalachian entrepreneurs, helps the entrepreneur create a fundable business, management team, and business plan, and invests in the business.

- State and city venture capital programs can be utilized. For example, Canada has succeeded in reaching out to its aboriginal (Native Canadian Indian) population with a number of financing programs and loan and venture capital offerings. The Business Development Bank of Canada has dedicated the Growth Capital for Aboriginal Business loan program to aboriginal business needs, including management support and mentoring in alliance with CESO Aboriginal Services.

- A public/private intermediary could be formed to funnel funds to Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses. For example, the Hopi Credit Association provides a bridge between banks and tribal borrowers: It obtains funds from banks and handles all loan selection and servicing interaction with tribal members, the banks deal with a responsible tribal credit union that understands banking needs, and the Native Americans deal with a credit union that understands their needs. Another example is the Southern Ute Growth Fund, which uses a partnership approach and co-invests, using its growth fund and capital provided by outside investors, in a variety of growth opportunities.

To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, a number of policies need to be considered, including creating more financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, expanding and/or rebuilding existing financial institutions on the Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, purchasing existing banks, and creating community development financial institutions. There are several examples of successful initiatives:

- On the Cheyenne River Sioux Reservation, the tribe used an existing revolving loan fund to create the nonprofit Four Bands Community Fund, that provides loans to businesses.

- In 1990, the Navajo Nation had only three bank branches and one ATM serving a geographic area of 17 million acres. To increase the availability of financial services on the reservation, the tribe entered into an agreement with Norwest Bank (now Wells Fargo) to build four new branch banks, hire and train Navajo personnel, and target financing to business startups and housing development.

- In all, nine tribal-owned commercial banks, seven credit unions, and fourteen loan funds have been developed nationwide to serve tribal communities.

- Hawaiian Community Assets, Inc. is developing a charter for Bank Aloha, the first Native Hawaiian-owned bank.

- The CDFI Fund has certified 34 community development financial institutions that have Native American and Native Hawaiian communities in their service areas, and five of these are located on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

The stakeholders believe that regional partnerships and alliances are essential to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and examples of successful regional initiatives include:

- Coastal Enterprises, Inc. -- CEI is a nonprofit community development corporation serving low-income communities in Maine, and it provides financial and technical assistance for development and expansion of industries, small businesses, housing, and social services. CEI mobilizes private and public resources to support projects and to facilitate self-determination and empowerment of communities, and it serves as a model for similar initiatives in the private and public sectors.

- The Native American Development Corporation -- NADC is a nonprofit community development organization that provides Indian business communities in Montana and Wyoming with funds to create jobs, develop long-term economic self-sufficiency, and facilitate access to capital. Its Capital Loan Fund was initially capitalized with funding from banks, the federal government, First Nations Development Institute, and private corporations.

- The Native American Lending Group, Inc. -- NALG is a nonprofit multi-tribe community based financial institution in New Mexico that serves 19 Pueblo communities. It was created to provide Native American tribes, businesses, and individuals access to private investment capital.

IV.F. Recommendations

As noted, the major stakeholders have mutually supporting roles in developing solutions. From the strategies and actions discussed in the report, we summarize below the key responsibilities identified by workshop participants for the tribes, financial institutions, and the federal government.

It was the consensus of the workshop participants that Tribes should:

- Adopt and implement capacity building programs designed to enhance Tribal knowledge of community development planning, banking and lending practices.

- Develop legal infrastructure and strengthen tribal courts.

- Leverage the value of sovereignty/trust assets and facilitate development of trust land.

- Create more financial institutions and facilitate access to capital sources that have not traditionally been used.

- Develop comprehensive strategic economic development plans and create proactive business environments.

The workshop participants recommended that financial institutions and investors:

- Adopt and implement capacity building programs designed specifically to enhance financial institution staff's understanding of Native American culture, law, governance, and markets.

- Recognize Indian Country as an emerging market for U.S. investment.

- Work with regional assistance, training, and mentoring programs that link capital providers to tribes.

- Develop new lending and financing products and Native American reservation or village-based programs.

The workshop participants recommended that the Federal government:

- Facilitate the financing of improvements in the physical, telecommunications, and utility infrastructure on Indian Lands.

- Sponsor the creation of a public/private equity fund to assist Indian Country in the financing of economic development projects.

- Provide support networks for and increase availability of technical assistance and training for a wide range of services including capacity building clearinghouses, networking forums, mentorship programs with industry, online technologies, and the linking of tribes with capital providers.

IV.G. A Three-Stage Action Plan

IV.G.1. Stage 1

In the first stage, the background work with tribes and potential capital providers should be conducted to create an investment climate that is both attractive to financiers and consistent with tribal goals. This can probably be achieved most effectively through regional level training and technical assistance that is flexible enough to take into consideration the unique circumstances, problems, and opportunities of individual tribes.

The background work required in this stage includes:

- Tribal nation building -- goals, structures, laws, methods of recourse, etc.

- Administrative/organizational capacity and skill-building, including financial literacy and education concerning equity alternatives and strategic and business planning skills.

- Improved Federal, state, and Tribal government coordination.

- Creation of financial institutions and private equity investment funds of various types, and of intermediaries and networks.

- Increasing the presence of lenders and investors in Indian Country.

- Creation of an attractive investment environment -- one that is simple and fair and contains incentives and (perhaps initially) guarantees.

- Improvement of the transportation, telecommunications, and utility infrastructure in Indian Country.

Work on these initiatives can begin immediately, and implementation should take between two and five years. Starting as soon as possible, regional groups in Indian Country could work together with federal and state governments to coordinate government programs, simplify interactions between tribal governments and federal and state government, and simplify the requirements tribes need to satisfy to qualify for federal and state programs.

During this period, discussions with potential lenders and equity investors of how to best get lender and equity investor offices located in or near Indian Country can begin at both the regional and tribal level. In addition, the federal government can determine the best ways to facilitate the creation of locations in or serving Indian Country using existing programs through the CDFI Fund, the Small Business Administration, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and other agencies. Finally, the federal government could explore how best to encourage the development of Indian Country community development banks or equity investor funds -- intermediaries that could facilitate deal making between Indian Country and the appropriate financiers, or of creating networks of capital providers interested in Indian Country. Part of this approach to various types of financial institutions and other capital providers could be a program designed to educate them about doing business and the opportunities and advantages in Indian Country.

IV.G.2. Stage 2

In stage 2, additional business opportunities attractive to lenders and equity investors must be created. This requires additional economic development, and tribal strategic planning should emphasize both expanding existing businesses and creating new ones, especially in New Economy industry sectors such as the Internet or high-tech health care. The major goal is to develop a thriving economy with diverse businesses, so that lenders and equity investors will be attracted to high-growth opportunities.

The initiatives required in this stage include:

- Development of business expansion opportunities.
- Development of infrastructure projects that could earn a high rate of return on investment.
- The formation and incubation of startups.
- Creation of targeted industry "clusters."
- Monitoring of performance and provision of ongoing technical assistance to the new firms created.

Once tribal strategic goals and plans are developed, further economic development planning can begin at the tribal level. This could begin as soon as the tribal goal-setting and strategic planning exercise is complete, potentially within six months after the initiation of Stage 1 in each region for the tribes that participated in the regional workshops.

The federal and state governments can best support these efforts through more coordinated and consistent funding of management training and economic development programs, and through increased investment in economic development. Existing successful programs could be further extended into Indian Country and new programs responsive to the particular needs of tribes or regional groups could be designed.

A concerted plan for economic development can take years to fully implement. New business opportunities can be planned, approved, funded, and executed in anywhere from a few months to five years. Considering the complex nature of economic development, it may require a decade to achieve real change. By that time, momentum can be created so that businesses will flourish and be funded with minimal further public technical assistance or funding, and private sector business partners, lenders, and investors of all types would be active in Indian Country.

The initiatives required in this stage include:

- Development of economic development plans based on tribes' strategic plans, perhaps with regional components. It is anticipated that it will require six months to a year for the development of the first plan.

- Support of training, technical assistance, and joint public/private funding for business expansion or new businesses, including business-specific management and entrepreneurial training, formation of full-service business incubators in different industry sectors, and business strategic planning, business planning, and financial planning training and technical assistance. It is anticipated that it will require three months to two years to provide this assistance for the businesses needing it.

- Development of new businesses and expansion of existing businesses, and the creation of related supporting businesses.

IV.G.3. Stage 3

The third and final state involves the aggressive targeting of equity investors, offering them attractive opportunities for investment in Indian Country. Potential strategies and actions to accomplish this include:

- Promotion of Indian Country lending and investment opportunities.

- Outreach to lenders and investors with "road shows."

- Formation of long-term relationships with key lenders and investors.

- Development of relationships with investment intermediaries.

- Provision of post-investment assistance for those doing business in Indian Country and of incentives for new projects.

- Monitoring of performance and provision of ongoing technical assistance to enhance performance in order to retain capital providers.

Milestones in Stage 3 include:

- Design of financial institution and investor outreach programs -- Indian Country to institutions and institutions to Indian Country. This should require three to six months after enough new opportunities to showcase have been identified.

- Implementation of capital outreach programs -- this should require one month to one year.

- Design and implementation of investor tracking and post-funding assistance and relationship management programs run by each tribe for their outside business partners, lenders, and equity investors. This should require about one or two years: One year to set up and one more year to implement computerized management information systems solutions, if needed. This could be accomplished on a regional basis, or a nationwide Indian Country basis to share resources.

Implementing all three stages of the strategy and then waiting for financiers to evaluate their experiences may take as long as 15 years.

Brett,

Per our discussion this afternoon, we (the Office of Strategic Initiatives) are currently helping plan for a fall presidential initiative that is tentatively entitled "Communities of Character" (it would serve as an umbrella for programs/rhetoric relating to renewing America's values/civic life). During our research, I came across the web site of an organization named Communities of Character. We need guidance from your office on any copyright/trademark issues that might arise as a result of that group's existence. The web site link is below. Please let me know if any further information would be helpful. A senior staff working group is meeting early next week on this initiative, so having an answer by the weekend would be great if possible. Thank you.

This confirms advice given orally to the two of you.

I have confirmed with the Office of Special Counsel that the RNC can send e-mails seeking political assistance (get out the vote efforts, etc.) to non-PAS and non-White-House individuals who happen to work in the Executive Branch. In addition, the employees can respond to those RNC e-mails on their government e-mail system. However, the employees cannot use their government e-mail system to forward those e-mails to others, and that caution should be noted in the RNC e-mail that is sent to the employees.

Please contact me with any further questions.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR,
FBI COUNTERTERRORISM DIVISION

Senate Judiciary Committee Olympics Field Hearing

"The 2002 Olympics - Cooperation Between Federal, State, Local, and Private Agencies to Address Public Safety Concerns"

May 31, 2001

Opening Statement:

Good afternoon, Senator Hatch, members of the Committee, and law enforcement colleagues. It is a pleasure to be with you today to discuss security preparations for the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, Utah. As you know from my previous briefings in Washington, D.C., major special events are a high priority for the FBI. We have been heavily involved in coordinated threat assessment and security proceedings for the 2002 Winter Olympics. Today, I'd like to concentrate my remarks on the Olympic Counterterrorism Center, the Olympic Joint Terrorism Task Force, and Command Post and Field Training exercises, as they relate to interagency cooperation and public safety.

Since the International Olympic Committee (IOC) selected Salt Lake City to stage the 2002 Winter Olympic Games on June 19, 1995, the FBI has undertaken significant counterterrorism planning in an effort to help ensure the safety and security of this major international sporting event. Leading the FBI's planning efforts in Salt Lake City is SAC Don Johnson, an active member of the Utah Olympic Public Safety Command (UOPSC). He is assisted in this effort by the FBI's Olympic Planning Squad which addresses all matters relating to FBI involvement, interagency cooperation, and support to the Games. The members of this squad are assigned full time to Olympic planning and are directly responsible for coordinating programs in the areas of: theater wide tactical planning, public safety training, communications systems, infrastructure protection, intelligence, weapons of mass destruction, explosive ordinance disposal, aviation support, media affairs, and accreditation, as well as a numerous other Olympic planning functions.

With an anticipated daily attendance in excess of 174,000 spectators, the participation of some 3,500 athletes from over 80 nations, and daily support provided by over 20,000 organizers and planners, the 2002 Olympic Winter Games easily qualifies as a world class sporting event. Coverage by over 9,000 media representatives broadcasting to a television audience in excess of 3.5 billion viewers will catapult these Games onto the world stage. Planning for the public safety and security of the Games has required an unprecedented level of cooperation and coordination among the myriad of local, state and federal law enforcement entities with responsibilities associated with the Games. There exists an unquestioned consensus among these agencies that it is impossible for any single law enforcement agency to possess all the resources required and expertise necessary to accomplish this task alone.

Planning for the public safety and security essential for hosting a safe and successful Games has long been recognized as every agency's primary objective. However, in the process of planning for the realization of this goal I believe that each of the law enforcement agencies involved has already accomplished something of equal importance. I am speaking of the partnerships that have been created at all levels of law enforcement which have been required to advance the Olympic public safety and security planning process. These partnerships will exist as a legacy long after the 17 days of the XIX Olympiad have past. I would like to briefly illustrate for you today how these partnerships have been built and how they have served to create a truly integrated Olympic Public Safety and Security Plan.

The Olympic Counterterrorism Center:

I sincerely believe that every agency involved has done everything in its power to help in the realization of a safe and secure Olympics. From the outset each agency recognized, due to the unique jurisdictional, legislative and budgetary issues as well as widely different agency capabilities, that Olympic public safety and security planning would require an immense amount of interagency communication and cooperation. In 1998, in the spirit of interagency cooperation, the FBI entered into a multi-year lease for office space to house the Olympic Coordination Center, Olympic Counterterrorism Center, the FBI Critical Incident Command Post, and the Joint Operations Center. This facility houses representatives of state, local, and federal agencies in a coordinated effort to address Olympic planning, preparation, and execution. To further this communication, the FBI is obtaining Top Secret security clearances for fifty local, state and federal partners to alleviate in advance any impediment to the open and complete sharing of information which may impact Olympic public safety.

The Olympic Joint Terrorism Task Force:

Another planning and operational requirement identified early on in the process was the need to combine and coordinate law enforcement capabilities from agencies at all levels to be able to rapidly assess threats and investigate significant incidents during the games. In May 2000, the FBI established the Olympic Joint Terrorism Task Force (OJTTF). The OJTTF is currently comprised of over 40 full and part-time local, state, and federal law enforcement officers and agents representing dozens of agencies and jurisdictions. Task forces, by design, are excellent vehicles for bringing to bear the specialized resources of each member's parent agency. The OJTTF is capable of collecting and analyzing intelligence, and investigating matters in virtually any jurisdiction at any level. This ability has been proven to enhance law enforcement efforts across the country and will serve to greatly enhance Olympic public safety and security operations. Again, the FBI has requested Top Secret clearances for all members of the OJTTF to better facilitate this joint working environment.

Command Post and Field Training Exercises:

Other than the military, perhaps no other public entity understands as well as law enforcement the profound impact and absolute necessity of quality training. Moving from the conceptual stages of Olympic public safety and security planning to operational readiness demands that all plans be tested in concert in an effort to identify areas that may need to be revised or enhanced. In November 2000, the FBI in close coordination with UOPSC invited all Olympic public safety planners to participate in a Command Post Exercise (CPX) designed primarily to test interagency communications and information flow in a limited nonoperational setting. This exercise was prefaced by initial training by all agencies on advanced information systems that will be utilized during the games.

In April 2001, after analyzing lessons learned in November and improving the plan, a full scale Field Training Exercise (FTX) was again jointly hosted by the FBI and all members of UOPSC. This exercise, involving more than 1,600 persons over a three-day period, tested all aspects of the Olympic public safety and security plan. Unlike the CPX, the FTX not only tested concepts and theoretical procedures, it fully exercised actual physical responses to threats and staged incidents as may occur during the games. This afforded all participating agency personnel the opportunity to fulfill their role in the overall plan simultaneously. Tactical teams exercised strategic assaults while investigators gathered evidence and processed crime scenes. Crisis management specialists coordinated with consequence management officials to first control, then manage, then mitigate the effects of a major hazardous materials scene. Federal venue security designers and local venue commanders worked together to manage a wide variety of incidents occurring at actual Olympic venues. And, as in November, the FTX afforded personnel from all agencies the opportunity to further refine their skills on Olympic information systems which provide the backbone for interagency communication during the Games. Continuing to provide quality training, the Salt Lake City Division will be hosting a weapons of mass destruction conference in Salt Lake City in June and is contemplating hosting another command post exercise in the fall of this year.

Closing:

As the lead federal agency responsible for crisis management, intelligence, hostage rescue, and the investigation of acts of terrorism, the FBI is resolved to continuing to promote effective interagency cooperation. Collectively, our goal is to ensure that all reasonable preparations and contingency plans are in place to create an environment throughout Salt Lake City, the state of Utah, and the entire nation in which we may host a safe and successful 2002 Winter Olympic Games.

In closing, I would like to express my sincere appreciation for the support afforded by this committee to the FBI and all law enforcement agencies engaged in the partnership that is Olympic public safety and security planning. I would also like to express my appreciation and admiration of the professionalism which law enforcement personnel at all levels have demonstrated throughout this process. With 253 days remaining before the Olympic flame enters the stadium, I believe we are already realizing one of the greatest benefits of the Games: the ability to bring people together; in this case the ability for law enforcement agencies in Utah and across the nation to exponentially magnify their effectiveness by working together. I am confident that all agencies join me in hoping that our first great dividend of this ability will be a safe and secure XIX Olympiad.

STATEMENT OF DIRECTOR BRIAN L. STAFFORD

Before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary Hearing on the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, Utah "Cooperation Among Federal, State, Local and Private Agencies to Address Public Safety Concerns"

May 31, 2001

Good afternoon, Mr. Chairman. I would like to thank you and the other members of the committee for providing a forum such as this on the 2002 Winter Olympics. On behalf of the United States Secret Service, I appreciate the opportunity to address our involvement with planning for the Winter Games, and to highlight the partnerships we have formed in the process of developing an operational security plan.

Coordinating security for an event of this scale is a monumental undertaking. We are expecting over 3,500 athletes, officials, and other participants; 9,000 media personnel, and an estimated 1.9 million spectators attending competitions at 10 different venues. The Games will proceed over a 17-day period, beginning with the opening ceremonies on February 8, 2002. The sheer number of people involved, coupled with the sprawling geographical area that must be secured, is awesome.

The responsibilities of the Secret Service also extend to providing a secure environment at the Olympic Village, the Main Media Center, and Rice-Eccles Oympic Stadium. In all, the Secret Service is responsible for the coordination of security in a theater of operation encompassing over 900 square miles, from venues in downtown Salt Lake City to more remote events in Provo and Ogden.

The goal of the Secret Service is to work with our partners in federal, state and local law enforcement, as well as with local officials in Utah, to provide a safe and secure environment for the participants and spectators, without diminishing the majesty and grandeur surrounding the Winter Olympics. As Americans, we remember the magical moments inspired by Mark Spitz, Mary Lou Retton, and Michael Johnson. But we also remember the tragedies brought by terrorists in Munich in 1972 and Atlanta in 1996.

The Secret Service's involvement with the 2002 Winter Olympics dates back to August of 1999, when the Winter Games were designated as a National Special Security Event (NSSE) by the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury. As with other NSSE's, such as the NATO 50th Anniversary Summit, the 2000 Republican National Convention, the 2000 Democratic National Convention, and the 2001 Presidential Inauguration, the Secret Service was assigned the role of lead federal agency for the designing, planning and implementation of security at the 2002 Winter Olympics.

However, even before this designation was made in 1999, the Secret Service had initiated the process of joining with other federal, state and local agency representatives in security preparation for the Winter Games. This highlights one of the many advantages of our field office presence across the United States. As early as 1997, it was our personnel who were already in place in Salt Lake City and other regional field offices that began working with other agency representatives and local officials in the public safety planning process.

The Secret Service has also been an active, voting participant in a leadership-level committee dedicated to the development of an overall safety plan for the Winter Games. This committee, known as the Utah Olympic Public Safety Command (UOPSC), represents 20 federal, state and local agencies in the seven-county impacted area.

In addition to the design phase of an operational security plan, survey teams were formulated with Secret Service personnel who possess the skills and expertise to identify any vulnerabilities at the designated venues.

These teams, coordinated by full-time Secret Service Olympic planning staff members, partnered with local counterparts from the public safety community and the Salt Lake Organizing Committee (SLOC). The teams produced a blueprint for designing, planning and implementing operational security at each official venue.

Additionally, each venue has dedicated Secret Service representatives who work closely with the State-appointed "Venue Commander." All planning for the federal operational security component is done in concert with the Venue Commander to ensure that the federal plan is seamless in appearance with the local public safety elements at the venues.

Examples of the working relationships we have with our local partners can be found at each of the venues. At the Delta Center, where the figure skating competition will be held, the Secret Service is working closely with the Salt Lake City Police Department, who will be providing significant support and manpower at all of the venues in the downtown Salt Lake City area.

The Secret Service has also joined with other local agencies and officials, including the designated Venue Commander from the Utah Highway Patrol, in developing a security plan for the Olympic Village, where athletes, coaches and other officials will be residing during the Winter Games. At Snowbasin, one of the alpine venues, the Secret Service and the Weber County Sheriffs Department are developing an operational security plan for the 3,000-acre site. Securing a venue of this size and scope is a challenge for even the most experienced public safety planners, and demonstrates the necessity of inter-agency cooperation, and our reliance on these and other local law enforcement agencies.

Other examples of these collaborative efforts include our partnerships with the Summit County Sheriffs Department and the Provo Police Department.

Recognizing the need to establish an extensive operational presence throughout the 900 square miles encompassing the Winter Games, the Secret Service has established four different regional support facilities, with sites in Salt Lake City, Ogden, Heber City, and Park City.

Inside the secure perimeter of each venue, the Secret Service's Technical Security Division (TSD) is working closely with explosive specialists from other state and federal agencies. Their objective is to ensure that nothing has been placed inside the venue ahead of time that could cause death or serious physical injury, and to assist Olympic planners in the development of appropriate protocols for Hazardous Materials and other technical security issues related to major events. Once that task is completed, TSD specialists, in cooperation with the UOPSC Bomb Management Center, will be in place at each official venue to provide screening of packages and vehicles entering the venue.

In addition, our TSD specialists for the Winter Games have been working closely with other explosives experts to develop and implement the overall Explosives Ordnance Disposal (EOD) Plan for the Winter Games.

In yet another example of inter-agency cooperation, the Secret Service and the FBI have been working closely to ensure that both the operational security elements and the crisis response elements of the federal counterterrorism plan relative to EOD have been properly and effectively integrated in the EOD plan. The Secret Service has also actively participated with the Department of State and the Olympic Committee in the development of an accreditation protocol for the 2002 Winter Games.

As you know, Mr. Chairman, no plan can be properly implemented without a reliable communications network. The Secret Service has provided a full-time dedicated communications specialist to work in conjunction with other specialists from the Utah Olympic Public Safety Command who are required to have a sophisticated communications network capable of servicing all of our public safety partners. This critical project has received significant contributions from the Department of Defense, the FBI, a number of other federal law enforcement agencies, and roughly 45 state and local public safety departments in Utah.

When the 2002 Winter Olympics is examined from a counterterrorism perspective, the Secret Service should be viewed as the preventative component that the federal government has in place here in Utah.

Our counterterrorism efforts at each Olympic venue represent a multi-layered approach. First, perimeter security. Second, physical security barriers. Third, Explosive Ordinance Disposal sweeps and searches, and fourth, airspace security.

Perimeters are generally established at the outer boundary of each venue where vehicles and pedestrians might first enter, and at the point where access would be controlled by magnetometers. These perimeters are maintained by security posts that are strategically positioned to deter any possible intrusion. Physical security features, such as fencing and concrete barriers, are also employed in a counterterrorism plan, but in a manner that is as non-obtrusive as possible. These features are regrettably necessary to prevent unauthorized access to the venues, as well as to protect each venue from any sort of catastrophic event, such as a weapon of mass destruction delivered by a vehicle.

Before a venue can be considered ready for its scheduled event and activities, we must first determine that the site is free and clear of any pre-existing or "planted" explosives. This determination is made by first sealing off the site, followed by a methodical search conducted by qualified EOD technicians. The Secret Service employs these methods daily in its protective mission, and has developed the sweep and search plan for the official venues in the same manner.

Securing these venues and protecting them from terrorist threats cannot be complete without addressing the airspace above each venue. All venues have been pre-designated as being in a Temporary Flight Restricted Area (TFRA) and will be monitored by the U.S. Customs Service and the Federal Aviation Administration for potential incursions. This capability also includes an air-response component that is designed to investigate, identify, and re-direct any intruding aircraft. Personnel involved with these assets have received extensive operational training in an airborne environment.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, the Secret Service is proud of our collaborative effort with other federal, state and local law enforcement agencies in providing a safe and secure environment for the 2002 Winter Olympics. No single agency could accomplish such an undertaking on its own, and though the Secret Service is leading this effort, we simply could not perform this mission successfully without the critical assistance, support and expertise provided by both our federal partners, and the dedicated law enforcement community in Utah.

That concludes my prepared statement, and I would be happy to answer any questions that you or other members of the committee may have.

Statement of Deputy Attorney General Larry D. Thompson before the United States Senate Committee on The Judiciary

Hearing on the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City: Cooperation Among Federal, State, Local, and Private Agencies to Address Public Safety Concerns
Salt Lake City, Utah
May 31, 2001

Mr. Chairman, it is my privilege to appear before you today for the purpose of discussing the role of the Department of Justice in working with the State of Utah, with federal, state and local agencies, and with the Congress to ensure that the 2002 Winter Olympics will be safe and successful.

As you know, I was confirmed a little over two weeks ago. I am just getting acquainted with all my responsibilities, and was delighted to learn that the Department has been actively involved in preparing for the 2002 Winter Olympic Games and Paralympic Winter Games. The Department of Justice is deeply committed to working cooperatively to ensure that the 2002 Games are safe.

This morning, I had the opportunity to tour some of the Olympic venues. It is a pleasure now to be sitting in this beautiful stadium which will host some of the Olympic events. Salt Lake City provides a magnificent setting for these historic games. I want to do everything I can to ensure that people from all over the world can come to the Games, bring their families, and enjoy the spectacular beauty of Utah and the excitement of world-class athletic competition, and feel safe and secure doing so.

The Department has invested heavily in this goal. Our investment has been as a partner with federal, state, and local agencies in planning for, and preparing to provide, law enforcement and public safety support for the games. We have invested funds in this effort, but more importantly, we have invested substantially in time, people, and energy.

The Department plays two key roles in ensuring public safety and law enforcement support for the Olympics. First, we work with all the agencies and components involved to plan and prepare for a safe and secure Winter Olympics. We started fulfilling that responsibility shortly after Utah was awarded the Games in 1995. For instance, the Utah Olympic Public Safety Command was required by statute to write a security plan for the Games – actually, a "game plan" for providing law enforcement and public safety services throughout the Winter Olympics and the Paralympic Games. Through our Office of Justice Programs (OJP), we have made nearly three million dollars available to assist in the development of that plan. The plan has been written and it has been tested.

We have also provided funding through OJP to arrange for housing and other services for the law enforcement officers who will be involved in ensuring Olympic public safety during the Games in 2002. We have assisted in providing, and have participated in, training exercises. In addition, we continue to provide support for a planning and operations center.

The Department has always believed that good working relationships among federal, state, and local agencies lead to effective law enforcement. Our efforts to provide needed funding are important. But perhaps as important as anything that I have talked about so far is the role that our Law Enforcement Coordinating Committee has played in connection with the Games.

Our Law Enforcement Coordinating Committees – or LECCs – in each of the 94 districts around the country prove every day that working together enhances the effectiveness of law enforcement in our communities. When I was the U.S. Attorney in Atlanta, I had personal experience with the LECC. I know that the LECC concept works. And nowhere has that been better demonstrated than by the Department's support of the District of Utah's Olympic LECC Initiative.

I will let U.S. Attorney Paul Warner discuss his Office's efforts, but I want to thank him publicly for dedicating a senior Assistant U.S. Attorney – David Schwendiman – to work full-time with the Utah Olympic Public Safety Command. David's efforts have complemented those of other Department personnel who have worked for over three years on preparations for the 2002 Olympic Games. Aided by their efforts, and with the personal involvement of the U.S. Attorney, we have forged effective working relationships with the federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies you see before you today, as well as with other agencies and components involved in the day-to-day planning and preparing for the games. This is a coordinated approach that the Department fully supports.

Our second role is crisis response. We sincerely hope that through our preparation and planning, we will never have to resort to crisis response. But if anything happens to disrupt the peace and serenity of the Utah Games, it is our responsibility to be prepared to address it. That responsibility is one we also share with federal, state, and local law enforcement agencies.

As you know, in August of 1999, the 2002 Olympics were designated as a National Special Security Event. Consistent with that designation, the FBI – as lead agency for crisis management – is working closely with the Secret Service, FEMA, and other federal, state, and local law enforcement and consequence management agencies to plan not only for security and public safety at the Olympics, but also for crisis response. These efforts are significant, since the Games will involve more than 3,500 athletes participating in events at 20 official Olympic venues over a 6,000 square mile area. The Paralympics will follow the Winter Games with more than 1,000 athletes participating.

Don Johnson, Special Agent in Charge of the FBI's Salt Lake City Field Office, has done an outstanding job in preparing to meet this challenge. Mr. Johnson and his agents have ensured that their planning efforts are in full partnership with their federal, state, and local law enforcement counterparts. Assistant FBI Director Dale Watson is here, of course, to speak about the FBI's efforts in this regard. He and all our law enforcement partners at this table have my full support.

I want to close by saying that I believe that the Olympic Games and the Paralympic Games are exciting and worthwhile. From the Games, heroes are made. They show us and our children the value of dedication and commitment to our goals. They show us that dreams can come true. That is why, as I said before, the Department of Justice is fully committed to working with all the agencies represented on this panel – and all the other federal, state, and local components involved in Olympic planning – to ensure public safety and security for the 2002 Olympic games.

Mr. Chairman, at this time I would be happy to answer any questions you may have.

W. picks a winner Lavenski Smith to the bench

DURING last year's nigh-endless election cycle--indeed, the presidential election alone refused to end--we interviewed more than three dozen political candidates. We know. We kept count. Like a prisoner scrawling the number of days served on the jailhouse wall. We made a game of it. Interview 36 candidates for justice of the peace and win a set of steak knives!

In retrospect, it wasn't that bad. There are lots of, uh, interesting politicians out there. Besides, one candidate did stand out: His name was Lavenski Smith.

We endorsed him for a seat on the state's appellate court. Naturally, he lost.

There's something about an R next to the name of any candidate for judge in this still populist state that makes voters go all wobbly. But even though Justice Smith didn't win, and even though he was soon to leave his seat on the state's Supreme Court, we had a feeling we'd be hearing from him again.

All of which is a roundabout way of saying: Lavenski Smith is an outstanding choice for a seat on the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals. George W. Bush should be applauded. Surely we will be able to say the same of the now Democratic-controlled Senate that will be called upon to confirm this candidate.

One thing we are sure of: Lavenski R. Smith will offer the Senate Judiciary Committee a splendid opportunity to do the right thing.

Vince Smith has been a lawyer, judge, professor, businessman, even a regulator of public utilities. And he's only 42. With his background and experience, and a refreshing reverence for the law, Vince Smith could make a great justice. Just as his predecessor, Richard S. Arnold, did.

Listen to what Chief Justice Dub Arnold had to say about his former colleague on the state Supreme Court: "He is a great man. He's very intelligent. He did a great job for us on the Arkansas Supreme Court. I think he'll make a great federal judge. I think President Bush made the best possible (nomination) he could have made."
That kind of enthusiasm is common when you talk to anybody who knows Lavenski Smith. The compliments. The raves. The recommendations. The expectations and high hopes. It's a lot for a man to live up to, but Vince Smith has done fine so far.
BACK DURING the campaign, when then-Candidate Smith was kind enough to drop by for a visit, we herded him into a broom closet of an office and grilled him as he sat in the only unbroken chair in the room. It couldn't have been a very pleasant experience. It was late in the day and late in the campaign, and by that time the editorial writers were as fatigued and unimpressive as a lot of the candidates. Lord only knows what kind of image we presented.
But there was Lavenski Smith, sitting arrow straight and taking each question as if it were of some real importance. He considered. He paused before answering. He weighed the import of ideas. He didn't just respond. Like this was important. Like the smallest question about the law is important. To listen to Vince Smith was to observe a mind at work. He reasoned as he spoke, yet did not meander. He would arrive at an answer that seemed as sure and steady as his posture. Above all, it was clear he reverenced the law.
The interview, or at least this interviewee, brought to mind Dick Cheney's re-assuring performance in his debate with Joe Lieberman. The way the future vice president didn't just hand over a pat answer as if he were passing out a flier, but actually seemed to think on camera. Out loud.
That was Lavenski Smith.
After he left, we wrote this:
Beyond his mastery of detail, what impresses most about Lavenski Smith is his general understanding of what the law requires of our judges: scholarship; care, labor, and patience (there's an awful lot of close reading involved in being an appellate judge); a sense of personal responsibility for important decisions ("I am in my opinions," he told us); a commitment not just of time but thought; a talent for collaborating with the other judges he must serve with on an appellate bench; the kind of self-restraint and discipline that those who wield power in the law or any other branch of political activity should cultivate; a tolerance and understanding of disagreement; the courage to make a decision that will not please everyone else, or perhaps will not please anyone else; and, not least, clarity of language.--Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, November 1st, 2000.
Yeah, we were impressed. We still are.

Subject: New Recommended Telephone Call Format

The format for the recommended telephone call has changed slightly since we are now getting the Chief of Staff's approval on all telphone call requests. Attached is a template for the new format. Also, would it be possible for you to e-mail the recommended telephone call to Harriet Miers, John Gardner, Barbara Barclay, Debra Bird, Sherry Kuntz, and Carol Cleveland in addition to submitting the original with 5 copies. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to call our office. We would appreciate your sharing this new format with the staff in your area. Thank you.

Ok - here is the deal.

We have discussed the request from Doug McCollum from American Lawyer/The NY Times. Another request is expected shortly from Elizabeth Frater at National Journal.

Some of you don't want to give resumes/bios to reporters - some of you don't care. The Judge does not have an opinion one way or the other - we send his resume to anyone who asks for it.

I am sending to Doug the Jan. 18 release that has very limited information (name, most recent job/firm, undergrad school and law school). I am faxing a copy over to Lori so you can get a copy of this from her if you want to see it. Included in this release is information on Tim, Chris, Brad, Stuart, Brett, Helgi, Courtney, Noel and Rachel.

Addington, Bellinger, Cobb and Flippin - your names are not in this release. If you want them to have this info on you please let me know so we can forward it.

Statement of the Immigration and Naturalization Service Hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee

The 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, Utah: Cooperation Among Federal, State, Local, and Private Agencies to Address Public Safety Concerns

Salt Lake City, Utah
May 31, 2001

International sporting and cultural event, such as the XIX Winter Olympic and VIII Paralympic Games (Games) being held in Salt Lake City, Utah, require an extraordinary level of cooperation and coordination is essential between Federal, state, and local government agencies and private entities. The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) has a natural role in support of the Olympics since the event will bring together athletes and participants from eighty nations, and visitors to the United States (U.S.) from numerous other countries.

The INS' challenge is to professionally support the unique requirements generated by the Olympic Games, while maintaining the current levels of law enforcement and immigration services relating to those customers and communities not involved in the Games. As an active partner in the Utah community, the INS works diligently to address immigration issues of concern to the community on a daily basis, and is prepared to support the goal of hosting an international event that is incident-free.

Our continued support to the community will be provided in a manner that promotes public safety while avoiding adverse impacts on Olympic and cultural events and the experiences of visitors to the area. This will be accomplished by coordinating the enforcement activities associated with the apprehension of alien smugglers; the expeditious and efficient removal of INS detained aliens from local jails with the U.S. Attorney and the UOPSC; identifying aliens that are involved in illegal operations intending to disrupt Games activities and visitors; and providing intelligence information to law enforcement agencies.

The INS' support to the Games involves five (5) basic functions. Our responsibilities include: 1) facilitating the entry of Olympic Family Members and spectators while excluding foreign nationals who could be a threat to the security of the games; 2) providing intelligence and law enforcement support to the Utah Olympic Public Safety Command (UOPSC) by removing illegal aliens convicted of crimes at the Designated Olympic Court sites (DOCS) and responding to law enforcement agency requests for assistance with foreign nationals suspected of being involved in terrorism or criminal activity; 3) furnishing immigration services to athletes and visitors; 4) safeguarding anyone requesting asylum or attempting to defect; and 5) assisting the U.S. Secret Service in securing selected venue sites.

International Entry

The Salt Lake Organizing Committee (SLOC) will officially accredit over 90,000 persons to both Games. Approximately 29,000 of these people will be foreign nationals entitled to special entry procedures developed to fulfill commitments made by the President to the International Olympic Committee (IOC) under the terms of the Olympic Charter. The Olympic Charter states: "the Olympic identity card or accreditation card establishes the identity of its holder and constitutes the document authorizing entry into the country in which the city organizing the Olympic Games is situated."

For the purposes of the Olympic and Paralympic Winter Games, the Olympic identity card and accreditation card have been combined. Consequently, high-tech Olympic Identity/Accreditation Cards or Paralympic Identity/Accreditation Cards will serve as a valid travel document (nonimmigrant visa), when used in conjunction with the alien's passport, for individuals that are accredited by the SLOC as an Olympic/Paralympic Family Member (OFM or PFM). These persons include, but are not necessarily limited to: athletes, coaches, trainers, support personnel; international judges; and officials of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

The INS has been working with SLOC and the Department of State (DOS) for over two years to develop a formal clearance protocol for Olympic accreditation. This process, which includes checks against immigration and criminal databases, is managed through the Olympic Visa Information Database (OVID 2002), maintained by the DOS, and linked to appropriate USG security agencies and to SLOC. For the first time, the visa process will be done almost completely electronically between those agencies and relevant consular posts. The database maintained by the DOS will include all relevant information needed to issue a visa and a digitized photo of the alien in question.

As a nonimmigrant visa, the official identity cards are considered secure documents, and the INS' Forensic Document Laboratory provided input to SLOC on the development of the card's security features. The document can be used no more than thirty days before and after the Games.

Once the card is issued, the information on the card will be downloaded from the OVID2002 system directly into the Interagency Border Inspection System (IBIS), which is used at all Ports-of-Entry by both Immigration and Customs Inspectors to verify the authenticity of the document.

The INS is currently producing a training video regarding the cards for Immigration personnel, both domestically and abroad, U.S. Customs personnel, DOS Consular Officers, and other law enforcement agencies that will need to understand the use of the card.

Unlike Atlanta, the INS anticipates that foreign arrivals for the Games will enter at POEs other than Salt Lake City. A training team will be travelling to as many POEs as possible in the fall to provide hands-on training to inspectors for INS and Customs. A limited version of the video will be provided to transportation companies, such as the airlines, to train boarding personnel in the identification and proper use of the OI/AC and PI/AC.

Law Enforcement

The INS participates in numerous law enforcement task forces, working groups and conferences at the local and regional Office levels. Additionally, INS sits on the Federal Affairs Olympic Working Group chaired by the U.S. Attorney in Salt Lake City.

The development and coordination of the INS' operational support plan for the Games is based on statutory mandates and the current Security Plan established by the UOPSC. To assist in the execution of the security plan, INS will staff the International Entry Desk in the Olympic Coordination Center (OCC) during all its hours of operation during the Games. The OCC will oversee and coordinate public safety and security functions under federal jurisdiction during the Games.

In order to support the OCC's requests for assistance, an INS Olympics Support Center (OSC) will be established and be co-located in the Sub-Office. Detailed personnel from INS will support the OSC. As required, the Salt Lake City sub-office personnel, including the Quick Response Teams (QRT) in Provo and Ogden, will be used to augment the activities of the OSC. Certain functions, such as intelligence and communications, of the OSC will operate 24 hours/7 days a week throughout the duration of the Games, to facilitate agency-wide command, control, and communications functions.

The personnel assigned to the OSC will execute directives from the OCC; assist local police in responding to crimes committed by foreign nationals; and maintain contact with INS enforcement officers assigned to DOCS. They will respond to any requests for information regarding the need to safeguard foreign nationals who are requesting asylum or attempting to defect, and address media inquiries, community relations, and legal matters that may arise.

Immigration Services and Benefits

In an effort to provide an adequate workforce to support the Games, the INS Service Center has been working with the Department of Labor and the SLOC to process over 50,000 applications for employment authorization. As was the practice for the Atlanta and Los Angeles games, the Service has consulted extensively with both the Departments of State and Labor on implementing employment visa and entry-related policies and procedures for the 2002 Winter Olympic Games. In working with the SLOC as well as private sponsors and employers, the INS, State and Labor have developed procedures that acknowledge the unique labor and employment situations presented by any Olympic games. At the same time, the procedures do not compromise any existing labor or immigration laws or policies, and do not guarantee any Olympic-related employer blanket approval of either labor certifications or employment-based petitions.

In addition, INS personnel will provide information and benefits to the thousands of foreign athletes, coaches, media, spectators and other visitors to the area during this period seeking such assistance. The INS will provide information on the terms of their admission, requests for extensions of their stay, and seek to replace lost immigration documents. The services necessary to adjust their status or extend immigration benefits to visitors to the games, or OFM/PFM whose accreditation is withdrawn by SLOC, will be provided by on-site INS staff.

Asylum Processing

Asylum Officers assigned to the Houston Asylum Office are prepared to promptly review the cases of any individuals who request asylum. INS Officers, trained under the Consenting Alien Protection Program will support the Asylum Officers, in the event special security arrangements are required.

Venue Security

The INS will provide personnel to assist with the security of designated venues, in support of the security plans developed by the U.S. Secret Service and coordinated through the Department of Justice. The level of INS' commitment has yet to be determined, but is expected to be finalized within the next few weeks. Coordination will begin immediately, once the decision is made.

Conclusion

In our ongoing support for the Games, the INS will ensure that the level of cooperation and coordination with state, local, and federal law enforcement and service agencies will be maintained at the high level that the Utah Community has come to expect.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax),

excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

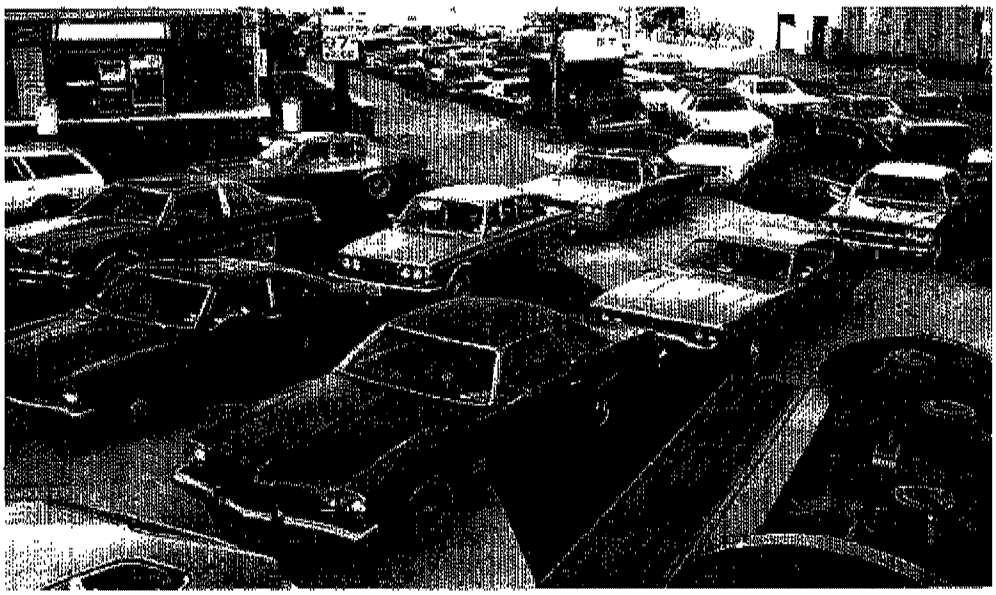
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start

more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

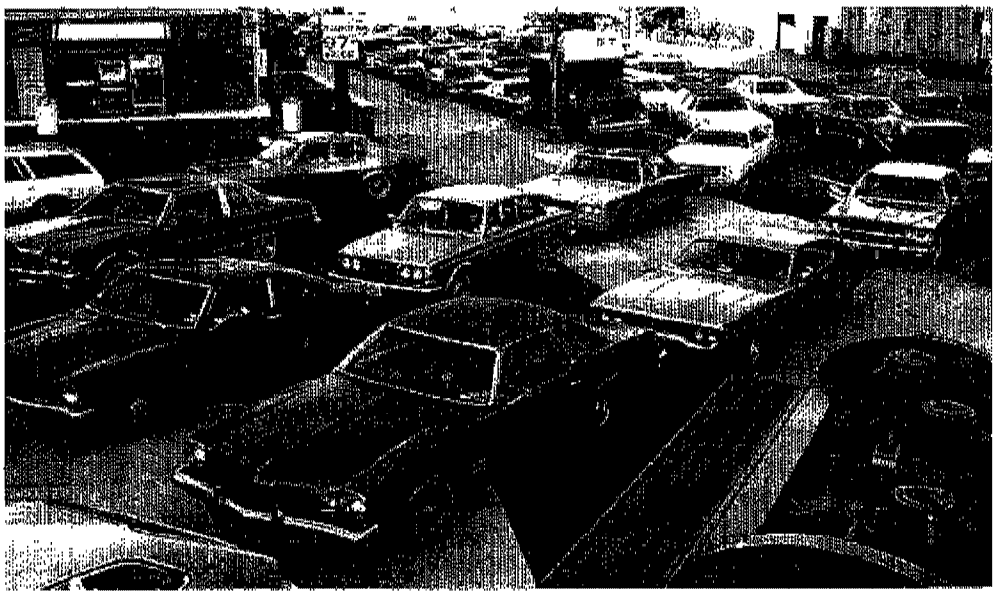
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

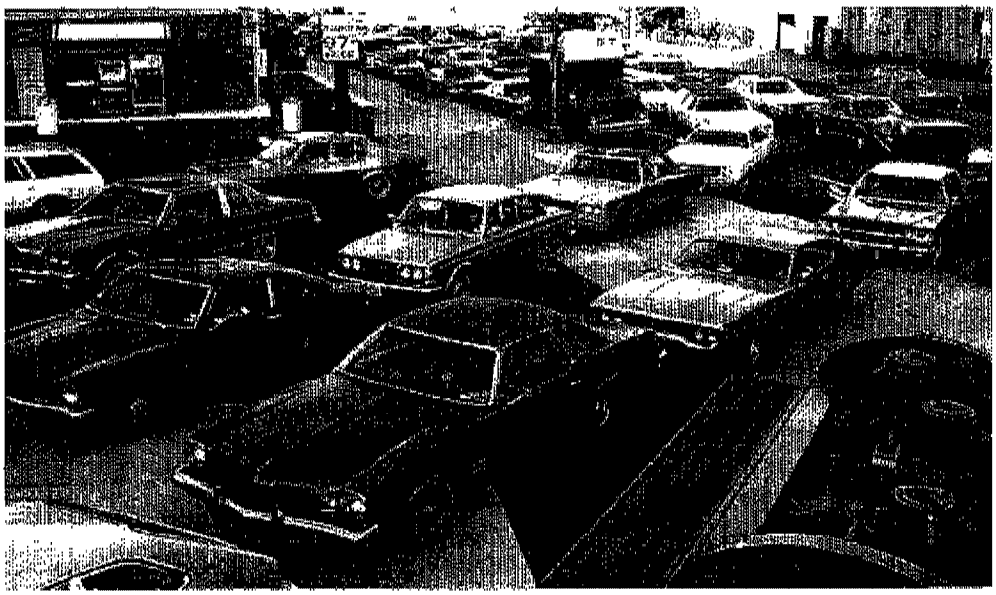
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

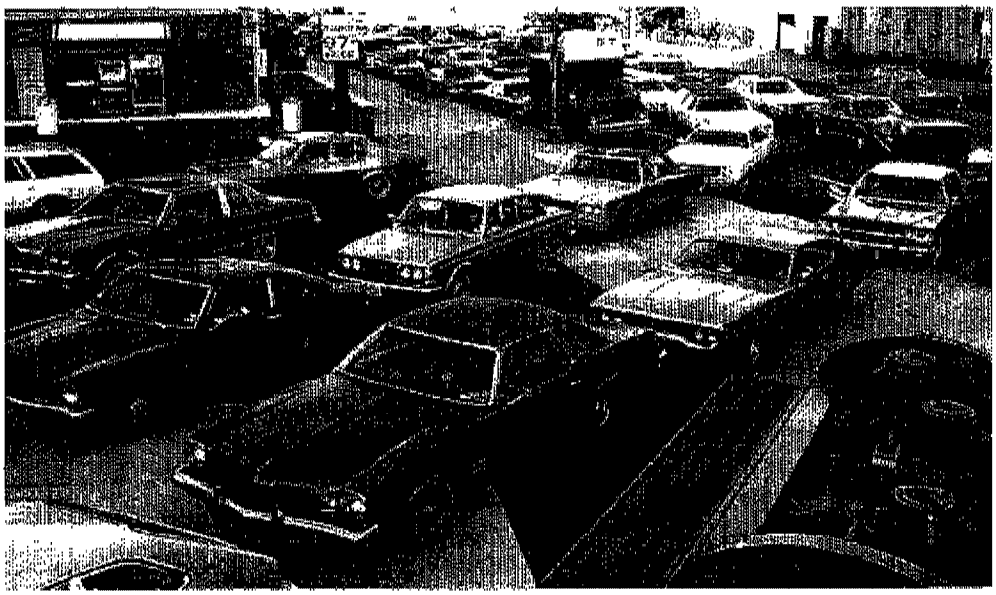
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

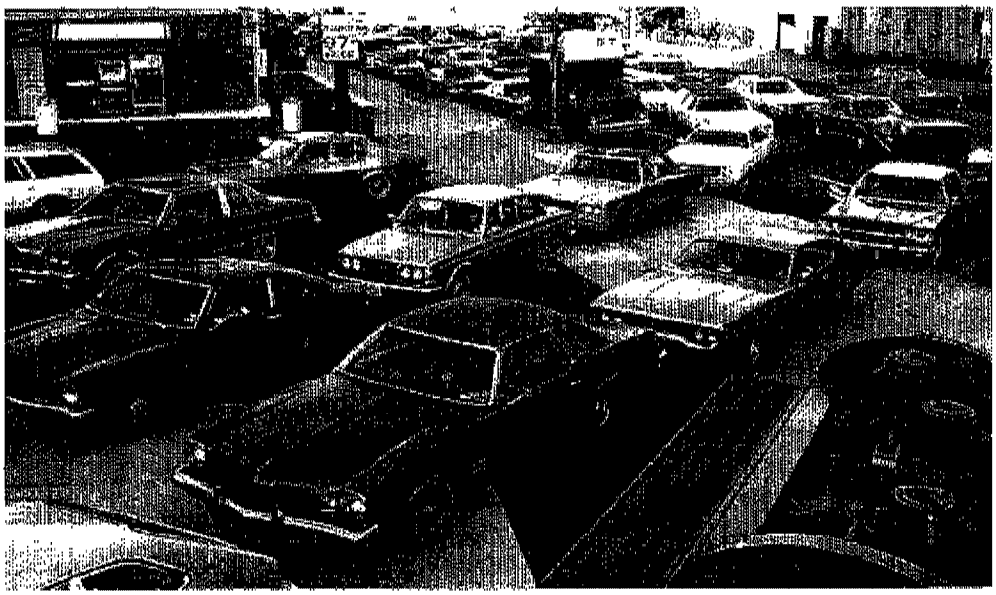
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

best, ed g.

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

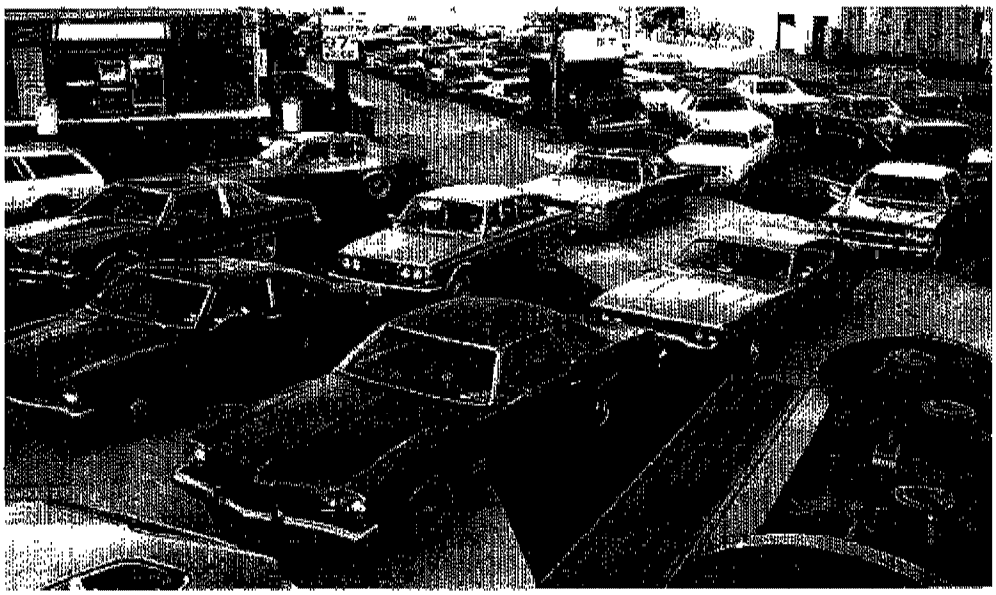
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start
more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

best, ed g.

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

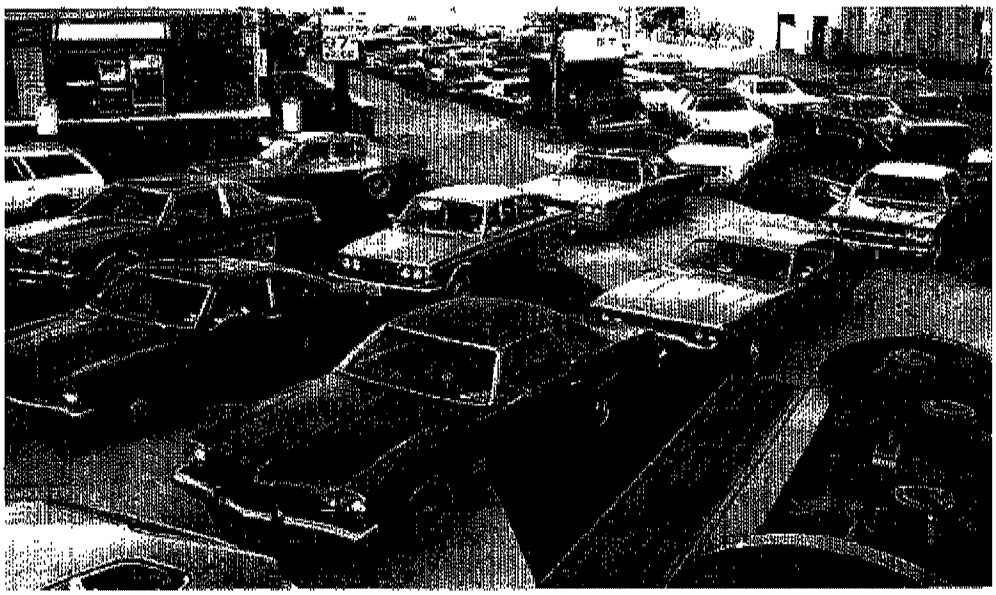
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

start
more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

best, ed g.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

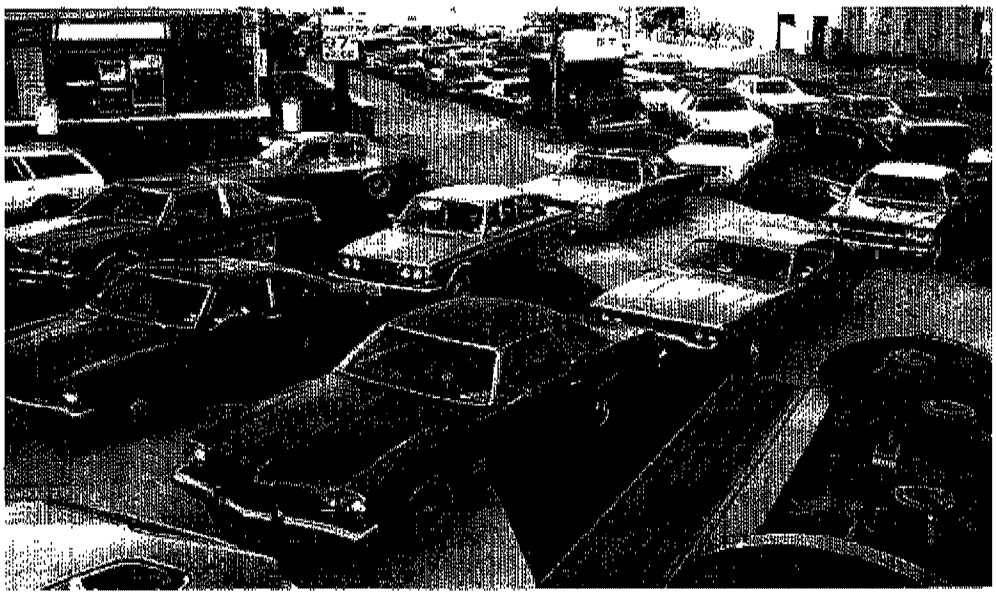
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

to the filing center. it will also be in roll call tomorrow, and we'll start
more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

best, ed g.

Subject: The President's National Parks Legacy Project

Domestic Policy has drafted the attached document outlining the President's National Parks Legacy Project that he will discuss today in California.

Thank you for coming.

The organizations assembled here today have agreed to work together on the 21st Century Energy Project to provide a counterbalance to the scathing, misleading assault on the first effort we have seen in this country in 20 years to enact a balanced energy policy.

Often flying under the false banner of environmental protection or conservation, groups like the Sierra Club and the National Resources Defense Council--not to mention Greenpeace--have become little more than outside resources for the Democratic National Committee. They were poised to echo the attacks of the DNC and congressional Democrats they supported in the last campaign weeks before the Bush Administration even unveiled its energy initiative. Ultimately, 40 of the plan's 105 recommendations ended up focusing on increasing conservation, but they did not let that fact change their plan.

They reflexively oppose any plan that would increase traditional forms of energy production as a means by which to restore the imbalance between our nation's demand for energy and its supply. They do so in the most cynical political fashion, branding every abundant and affordable source of energy as a threat to clean air or clean water in order to frighten policy makers by frightening suburban women swing voters.

Rarely do these groups acknowledge--nor are they asked--how they would meet the demand necessary for Americans to maintain higher standards of living over the next 20 years in the absence of greater domestic production. The answer is that they would not. They would instead reduce demand by government fiat.

Their agenda includes:

higher energy prices (which former Vice President Al Gore touted in his book and which the Democratic congress voted for in the form of a BTU tax), excessive regulations that have prohibited construction of an oil refinery in the United States for nearly 25 years and no major new generating plant in California in a decade,

government control of existing power lines and energy plants,

and artificial price caps that can only result in government rationing of energy usage--just as it did in the '70s under Jimmy Carter.

These liberal elites chide us on the need to mandate people into smaller, less safe "more fuel-efficient cars" as Dick Gephardt railed at a press conference earlier this month--a press conference at which he arrived in his Chevy Suburban.

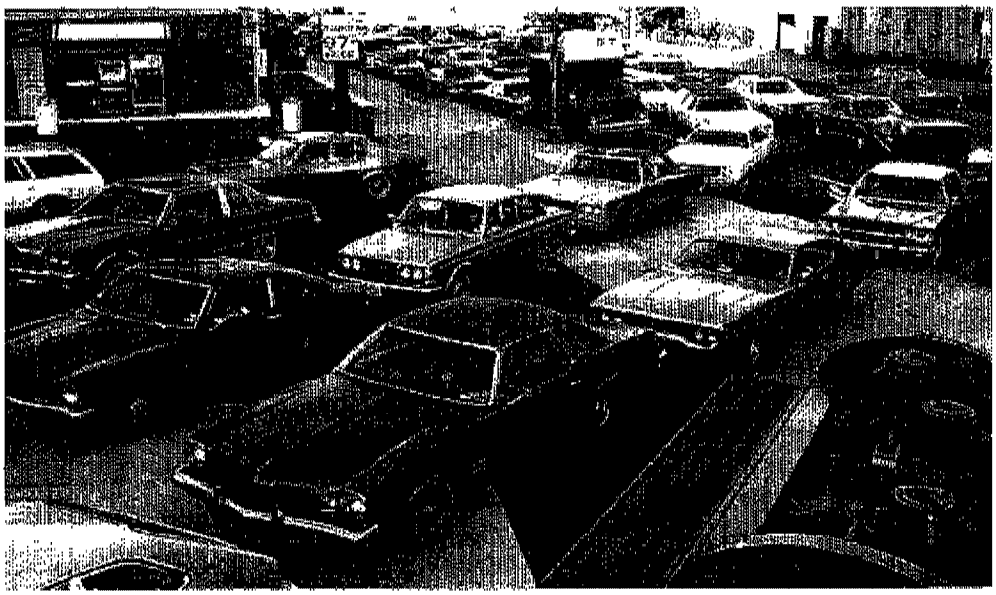
They believe oil, gas, coal and nuclear energy are inherently bad, and that working Americans are the problem here because we use too much of it. Theirs is a world view of scarcity, where innovations in clean coal technology, precision drilling and advancements in nuclear energy and safety simply never happened. They are stuck in a time warp, waiting with baited breath for Jackson Brown and Bonnie Raitt to hold their next No Nukes rally.

"That '70s Show" is entertaining on television every Tuesday night, but a little tired on the floor of the House of Representatives every weekday morning.

We believe in conservation. It makes a lot of sense. It's good economics. But conservation alone won't keep the lights on. California ranks second in the nation in energy conservation, but its consumption has risen 11.3% over the past decade while its production has declined 1.7%. Without a balanced approach, supply will drop and prices will rise. Seniors on fixed incomes will be forced to limit their energy use. Blackouts will continue to roll. And all of us will feel the decline in a quality of life that is directly tied to our quantity of energy.

In the coming months, the 21st Century Energy Project will serve as a clearinghouse for information on energy policy from a market-oriented approach and an understanding that higher levels of domestic production and environmental sensitivity are not mutually exclusive in the 21stCentury.

REMEMBER THE '70s?



Gas Lines were long, rationing was in, Jimmy Carter was President and he told us to wear a sweater.

Liberal elites think that's still the answer.

The last time we faced an energy crisis Jimmy Carter was President. Two decades ago, over-dependence on foreign oil created a shortage and drove prices up. The solution was rationing. It was a bad idea.

Today, we are again becoming too dependent on foreign oil when demand for oil and electricity consumption is increasing. This is simple Economics 101: when demand increases faster than supply, prices go up.

Liberal groups and some politicians believe rationing, price caps, higher taxes and excessive regulations will solve the problem. We disagree.

Their policies will only decrease supply and further increase prices. That hurts lower and middle class families the most. In fact, if some on the left have their way, "soccer moms" will be forced to sell their mini-vans – they'll become a luxury only the elite can afford.

Conservation alone won't keep the lights on.

California ranks as the second best state in energy conservation. If conservation alone could solve the problem, California wouldn't be facing high rates and rolling blackouts.

The 21st Century Energy Project rejects the premise that we can conserve our way out of this energy shortage. A balance between conservation and increased supply is the only solution. We support an energy policy based on sound science and a rational, balanced, market-oriented approach that will ensure affordable energy for all Americans.

That's why we applaud President Bush's approach - a balanced, comprehensive 105-point plan that includes over 40 recommendations that increase conservation, as well as a diversified proposal to reduce dependence on foreign oil while using 21st Century technology to produce clean, abundant and affordable energy.

21st Century Energy Project to Launch Wednesday

New Project Will Educate Public on Domestic Energy Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. – In response to the national energy policy debate, a new coalition will be launched Wednesday. The 21st Century Energy Project (21CEP) will educate the public on the impact various energy policies will have on Americans' quality of life.

The 21st Century Energy Project seeks to coordinate the resources of organizations committed to striking a balance between our nation's energy supply and demand. Member organizations are devoted to finding a sensible approach to the energy policy debate that protects America's future and security, and exposing the negative impact of the liberal energy agenda.

The 21CEP will serve as a counterbalance to the liberal groups who oppose increased energy production and seek government-mandated reductions in energy consumption.

At the launch event, an ad campaign will be unveiled.

End Original ARMS Header

attached find a media advisory regarding today's 1 pm press conference launching the 21st Century Energy Project, of which I am executive director.
the groups at today's event at the nat'l press club include ATR, CSE, ACU, 60+, Frontiers of Freedom and others. if you plan on attending, skip the red meat at lunch.

we have a full page ad in the fresno bee today to support the president's visit, a fax copy of which is attached. john peschong helpfully got copies

start
more ads when congress returns.

my draft opening statement is also attached. it's a good example of the tone we've been trying to change!

best, ed g.
